Army Buys 687 Pursuit Planes, Big Bombers

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army acted yesterday to double its force of heavy, long-range bombers—chief weapon of hemisphere defense—in negotiating orders for more than $300,000,000 worth of fighting planes, engines and equipment.

Contracts were placed for 687 big bombers and their defense counterpart—fast-climbing interceptor planes—while an agreement was reached for the manufacture during the next 21 months of 20,000 high-speed plane motors and 14,000 propellers.

Draft Up Tuesday

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, Administration leaders set down the controversial conscription bill for consideration on the House floor Tuesday. To avoid a repetition of the prolonged Senate discussion of the measure and assure passage by the end of the week, a rule was brought in limiting debate.

The House Rules Committee approved a resolution which limits general debate to two days and permits the disputed Russell amendment empowering the Government to take over plants for defense purposes to be offered from the floor. Without the latter provision, the amendment would not have been germane.

Prior to yesterday's order, the Army had awarded contracts for only 56 combat planes from the funds appropriated by Congress this year. All told, 2,677 planes out of 4,247 for which money was voted this spring, are on order. A total of 1,934 of those already contracted for are training craft or other non-combat types.

Boeing Gets Order

Yesterday's order for bombers went to the Boeing Aircraft Co., of Seattle. It was for 277 four-engined planes, costing $70,449,955, which are capable of crossing the Atlantic. Less than 60 of the type are now in

Roosevelt Waits For Draft of Order To Call Out Guard

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt indicated today he expected momentarily from Washington a draft of formal orders for calling out the National Guard and organized reserves for a year's training.

But he was unable to say, at a press conference, whether September 15, a date mentioned in military quarters, would find the first units of civilian soldiers mobilizing for active duty.

The President reported excellent progress in talks with England on the leasing to the United States of sites for air and naval bases in British possessions in the Western Hemisphere, but said he could not discuss the matter or predict when definite action might be expected.

Gallup Gives Willkie Big Lead in Maine

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 31.—Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential candidate, is leading President Roosevelt in Maine by a vote of 54 to 38, the Institute survey shows—or substantially more than Gov. Landon's majority in Maine in the November election of 1936.

Comparison of major-party Presidential sentiment in Maine today with the Presidential vote four years ago reveals a seven-point drop in Roosevelt's strength.

| | Per Cent Favoring GOP Candidate | Dem. Candidate |
| November, 1936 | 57% | 43% |
| Today's Survey | 64 | 36 |

Approximately 1 vote in every 8 (12 per cent) said he was undecided about his Presidential choice at this time.

G. O. P. Aspirants Lead

Preliminary returns from a special Institute survey on the Maine Senatorial and gubernatorial races indicate that the Republican candidates for these offices are also well out in front of their Democratic opponents at the present time.

Surveys on both races show:

Governorship
SEWALL (Rep.) ..... 72%
REDMAN (Dem.) ..... 28%

Senatorship
BREWSTER (Rep.) ..... 66%
BRANN (Dem.) ..... 34%

Political analysts have estimated that over the past 40 years the Maine vote in September elections has averaged about 18 percentage points more Republican than the vote of the Nation two months later.

Willkie Again Raises Issue Of Plant Draft

Calls for Roosevelt Views as Plan Stirs Debate in Senate

President Roosevelt yesterday remained silent on the Overton-Russell draft industry amendment to the Senate's conscription bill as Wendell L. Willkie again demanded he state his views.

In Rushville, Ind., Willkie said it was the President's "clear duty" to state his position on the amendment the Republican nominee already has denounced as "potential dictatorship."

The President at Hyde Park charged an effort to involve him in a political controversy and said there was a precedent against the Chief Executive commenting on pending legislation.

The amendment assumed stature as a major campaign issue, as ten Senate Democrats, led by the co-authors of the move to commandeer private plants for defense purposes, one by one rose to assail Willkie's emphatic stand against the amendment.

Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, accused Democratic colleagues of "poor sportsmanship" in attacking a man who was not present.

Senator Gurney, of South Dakota, the only other Republican to speak, called the Senate debate "much ado

Adjournment Is Expected In a Month

Majority Leaders Agree on Possibility; G.O.P. Compromise On Recess Is Likely

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House and Senate Democratic leaders decided yesterday to attempt to recess or adjourn Congress sine die before the close of September.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley and House Majority Leader Rayburn agreed that all essential defense legislation would be passed by the middle of September.

With no other urgent matters in sight, both favored adjournment if possible with the understanding that the President can call Congress back if an emergency arises.

Recess Suggested

Republican members, many of them just as anxious as the Democrats to clear out of Washington for political homework, are on record against any sine die adjournment but might compromise on a recess until after the November election.

The adjournment issue has been fraught with political dynamite since spring, when Republicans made an issue of Congress remaining in session for the duration of the war emergency and won an applauding hand from back home.

But yesterday Congressional leaders, after a series of talks on adjournment, agreed that the defense job, as far as legislation is concerned, was "practically finished."

House Majority Leader Rayburn said the House in his opinion will be ready to give the "all clear" signal about September 15.

Tasks Remaining

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who still faces indefinite Senate hearings and debate on the excess profits tax bill, said the Senate should be ready "anywhere between September 15 and September 20."

Following this week's burst of speed on the legislative front, the only big tasks that remained for a weary Congress were:

Final agreement on the $5,000,000,000 defense appropriation bill, which has passed both Houses and went to conference yesterday.

House passage of the peacetime conscription bill, slated for late next week.

Senate passage of the defense tax bill, which cleared the House hurdle Thursday, but may run into prolonged controversy over amendments in the Senate following three or four days of Finance Committee hearings.

The signal either to recess or adjourn will come immediately on Senate passage of the tax bill.

District Crusade Opens to Lower Accident Toll

One of Washington's most far-reaching traffic safety movements got under way yesterday. The Commissioner's Traffic Advisory Council started to expend $12,000 in a year-round crusade to lower the city's accident record.

Funds for the drive were provided jointly by Congress and WPA—$7,500 in a Congressional appropriation and $4,500 from WPA.

On street cars, buses and in gasoline stations the first of a series of new safety slogans appeared.

Periodic announcements warning pedestrians and motorists of lurking dangers on District streets were broadcast over all local radio stations.

For pedestrians, the theme is "The Curbline Is the Danger Line" and for motorists, "Deadly Power Is in Your Hands—Use It Sanely." New slogans will be adopted each month.

Axis Gives Carol Pledge To Halt Stalin

Border Guaranteed, Troops Promised; Crisis in Rumania Narrowly Averted

By the United Press

Bucharest (Saturday), Aug. 31.—King Carol narrowly escaped overthrow of his cabinet, and perhaps a wrecking of an Italo-German plan of Balkan peace, when his crown council early today approved the surrender of nearly 21,000 square miles of territory to Hungary.

The crown council, in the midst of rising public anger, approved the ceding of half of Transylvania to Hungary in exchange for a formally signed guarantee that Italy and Germany will throw up a barrier against any Russian invasion from the north.

German troops will be sent to the Rumanian-Russian frontier—across Hungary from the Reich—if and when there develops a threat of a Soviet drive into the Balkans, the Rumanians were promised.

The surrender of between 19,000 and 21,000 square miles of Transylvania was agreed to at 3:10 p. m. yesterday in historic Belvedere Palace at Vienna and the Crown Council's ratification came at 2:40 a. m. today after a stormy 4½-hour session.

Palace Is Guarded

As the council met in Carol's Palace sullen crowds milled in the streets and guard with rifles took up posts around the palace.

Rumania had capitulated under German and Italian demands of an "ultimative character" sent here from Vienna, it was announced officially.

As the crown council met, its members at loggerheads because some of them had not been on hand the previous night to vote on the virtual ultimatum from Vienna, there were widespread fears of a cabinet overthrow.

Had the government been overthrown, following a split within the crown council, the territorial surrender to Hungary might have been repudiated and the entire Balkan peace formula of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini wrecked or thrown out of gear.

The official Rumanian news agency at 3:30 a. m. issued what it called an "official note" announcing the crown council's decision, ratifying the Vienna accord.

(In Budapest it was reported that demonstrations among Rumanians protesting against the cession of territory had broken out along the Transylvania border and that Rumania's chief negotiator at Vienna, Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu, had resigned.)

Girl R. A. F. Pilot's Body Found in Sea, Germans Report

Berlin, Aug. 30 (AP).—The body of a girl pilot in Britain's R. A. F. has been washed ashore on the Schleswig-Holstein coast and the findings of a post-morten will be forwarded to the International Red Cross at Geneva, it was officially announced tonight.

While Reich news commentators hailed the incident as direct proof of Britain's crying need for pilots, a government statement said the R. A. F. flier had been definitely identified as a girl.

Dressed in the regulation brown and green flying overalls of the R. A. F., the girl carried a pocket watch with an airplane engraved on the case, it was said.

'Squeeze Play' Tried in Strike

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 30 (AP).—Girl cigar plant strikers, jitterbugging to company-furnished music, today turned womanly wiles on a vice president in an effort to win concessions which two days of formal negotiation had failed to get.

Several hundred young women employes of the John Swisher & Son cigar factory—one of the biggest in the world—are demanding increased pay and reinstatement of a plant manager.

The girls swarmed on Carl Swisher, vice president and general manager, when he came into the plant yard today. They hugged him, mussed his hair, kidded him. Swisher laughed but was unable to get back into the plant until police came to his aid. Later, he and other officials met with spokesmen for the strikers.

"I THOUGHT HE WAS ASLEEP," said the father of Thomas Amos, jr. But the boy was near death from gas fumes. Thomas can thank a former Navy man that he's alive

The family of Thomas Amos, jr., 9, of 87 New York avenue northwest, went to sleep last night thankful for the first-aid lessons a former Navy man learned in the service. They saved Tommy's life.

Tommy, playing in the front yard early in the evening, was overcome by gas fumes rising from a break in the main leading to the house. He lay there until his father came out to call the boy to bed.

"I thought he was asleep," said Tommy's father, "but I couldn't arouse him. Then I smelled the gas and became frantic."

Mr. and Mrs. Amos tried to revive the boy without success. Someone called a doctor ,and someone called the police rescue squad.

Eventually a doctor and the rescue squad came.

Meanwhile Charles Arrington, who lives in the same house with the Amoses, went to work on the unconscious boy.

"I was in the Navy once," he said afterward, "and learned how to perform artificial respiration."

He tried his methods on Tommy for about 15 minutes before Tommy began to respond.

The rescue squad took Tommy to Sibley Hospital, where he was treated for gas poisoning and released in time for a good night's sleep."

"It was Mr. Arrington who did it," said Amos, sr. "When he started with Tommy I was scared it was too late."

London (Saturday), Aug. 31. British Spitfire fighting planes, coordinating a spectacular defense with hundreds of antiaircraft guns and searchlights, beat off early today a persistent attack by German night raiders which subjected the capital to its second longest air raid of the war.

The Germans carried out their nightly "pest patrol" singly or in small groups.

The raiders loosed salvos of bombs on the suburban areas and were given a surprise when they found British Spitfire fighters waiting to engage them in the web of searchlights as they sought to penetrate the heart of the city. There were no reports of bombs falling in the midcity.

[The morning newspapers heralded the assault on the British Isles and the outcome as "the biggest mass defeat of the biggest mass raids." An estimated 1,500 German planes were involved, according to the United Press—Editor's note.]

Alarm Lasts Six Hours

The alarm was in effect 6 hours 39 minutes. The signals screamed London's fourth alarm since yesterday morning at 9:11 p. m. and all clear was not given until 3:50 a. m.

Hungary Jubilant At Return of Half Of Transylvania

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Hungary, Aug. 30.—Hungary's army, fully mobilized and eager to march, awaited impatiently tonight the signal to advance to the summit of the Carpathians and there to take up its new assignment as a military buffer for Germany on Russia's western frontier.

The country was in a high state of jubilation, for today Hungary got back about half of the 1,000-year-old province of Transylvania—including the natural mountain fortress which almost since the beginning of time has guarded central Europe from armies of the East.

The main point of the settlement imposed by the Axis, as seen here, was to cut short any further Russian expansion into this Balkan "living space."

In the fact that German motorized legions are to be permitted to stand on the Rumanian-Russian frontier, some observers saw, too, the development of a virtual Nazi protectorate much like that in Slovakia.

Rumanian forces were ordered to leave within 14 days the ceded part of Transylvania.

British Bombs Start Fires Over Berlin

Antiaircraft Shell Splinters Rain on City; Electric Works Hit

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Saturday), Aug. 31.—British air raiders swept over Berlin early this morning and dropped dozens of bombs which started two fires in apartment houses, seriously injured three civilians and slightly damaged an electrical appliance works.

Military authorities said damage to establishments which might be regarded as military objectives was extremely small.

Two incendiary bombs crashed through the roof of a church in the southeast section of the capital. A blaze was started in the choir loft which was quickly extinguished.

An apartment house next door, however, burned extensively and the walls of Bethesda Hospital were scorched.

One fire, in the southeastern section of the German capital, was visible for many blocks. It was the southeastern section which also was bombed on Thursday morning, when ten civilians were killed.

Half an hour after the fire started there was a big explosion which sent sparks flying high into the sky

Parachutes Save Crew of 8 as Army Bomber Crashes

Kalama, Wash., Aug. 30 (AP).—All eight occupants of an Army bomber parachuted to safety today after the motors failed. The plane crashed in dense woods near here.

The bomber, of the Seventy-third Bombardment Squadron, McChord Field, Wash., crashed on the James Brattche farm, 10 miles north of here.

William Huntley, apprentice mechanic, the first man to parachute from the falling ship, said "the first we knew anything was wrong was when the motors stopped."

The others who reached ground safely were:

First Lieut. Jack B. Donohew, Mexico, Mo., West Point graduate, the pilot; Second Lieut. Harry P. King, San Marcos, Tex., copilot; Staff Sergt. H. A. Davis, Tacoma, crew chief and engineer; Sergt. D. T. Delong, Independence, Mo., bombardier; Privates T. H. Stitt, Pipestone, Minn.; H. W. Dullinger, San Fernando, Calif., and W. A. James.

Huntley, of Riverbank, Calif., said some of the fliers were bruised, but none seriously injured.

Three men were killed last night when a huge semitrailer truck and a passenger automobile crashed and burst into flames at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, Md.

Two men in the truck, so badly charred they could not be identified immediately, were trapped in the cab and burned to death while rescuers strove frantically to reach them. One was at the wheel, the other in the sleeping compartment behind the driver's seat.

B. K. Reaves, 30, of 916 Evarts street, said by police to be driving the automobile, died three hours later in Casualty Hospital of a skull fracture and burns about the face and body. His companion, Robert J. Piercy, 24, of the Evarts street address, escaped without injury.

Douglas Haselden, 27, employed by a Bladensburg garage, was admitted to Casualty Hospital with severe lacerations of the face shortly after the accident. Police said he was injured in an altercation with another spectator at the scene.

Witnesses said they believed one of the men in the truck was white and one colored. It was not possible to learn at once where

Missionary and Wife Killed In Sudan by Italian Airmen

Cairo, Aug. 30 (AP).—The United States Legation informed the State Department tonight that Dr. Robert Grieve, 28, an American medical missionary, and his wife, about 23, had been killed August 23 in an Italian air raid on their outpost in an isolated region of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, near the Ethiopian frontier.

Information received at Khartoum from Dr. T. A. Lambie, field director of the Sudan Interior Mission, with which the couple was associated, confirmed British reports of their death, the legation said.

Besides Dr. and Mrs. Grieve, the Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth Oglesby, also Americans, of Brooklyn, N. Y., were reported by Dr. Lambie to have been gravely injured. (In Washington, the State Department said Dr. and Mrs. Grieve were from Spokane, Wash.)

High British sources said the Italians dropped 30 bombs and machine-gunned the missionary station at Doro, in Upper Nile Province, despite frantic efforts to signal them with American flags. There was no indication, however, from what alti-

Birthday for Mars

"Gloomy Sunday" was the name of the song that drove a number of Hungarian youths to suicide some two years ago, but it's a far more fitting name for that Sunday a year ago that marked the beginning of the Hitler War, with the declaration of war on Germany by England and France.

Now Mars celebrates his first anniversary, and Sunday's Post reviews the whole year of warfare for you:

U.S. Indicts Krupp, General Electric

Special Grand Jury Charges Monopoly Of Defense Material

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 30.—A special Federal grand jury investigating antitrust law violations in war industries today indicted the General Electric Co. and the Krupp Co., of Essen, Germany, of conspiracy to fix prices and control supply of hard metals and tools vital to the Nation's defense program.

The indictment, described by Federal investigators as the most important defense-monopoly bill yet returned, was the second naming General Electric Co., and the fourth war industry indictment by the grand jury in as many days.

The first charged four firms with price-fixing in the airplane fabric industry, the second accused four companies of monopolistic practices in the glass bulb field, and the third accused five corporations of conspiring to control production and sale of bentonite—a molding clay. Individual officers were also named in each case; General Electric was cited in the second.

Walter Stearns Named

Named in today's bill, beside the General Electric and Krupp companies, were:

Walter M. Stearns, of Schenectady, N. Y., manager of trade relations and special contracts for General Electric; Carbaloy Co., of Detroit, a wholly owned subsidiary of General Electric, and W. G. Robbins, of Detroit, president, and Zay Jeffries, of Cleveland, chairman of the board.

In Cleveland, Jeffries declared operations of his company "have been carried out in guidance by competent counsel" and that the firm "has not knowingly violated any statute of the United States."

The Krupp firm, through power to veto patent licenses to American firms for manufacture of tungsten carbide—used in machine-cutting tools—holds the power to exert control over this country's defense program, the Government charged.

The indictment alleged Krupp agreed not to export tungsten carbide, tools and dies to the United States, and that General Electric and Carbaloy, in return, agreed not to export, thus setting up international control of the cutting elements.

The prosecutors expressed the opinion that similar agreements between Krupp—London dispatches said British bombers raided its Essen plant last night—and English firms had affected England in her defense preparations.

Tungsten carbide was said by the government to be used in hardening cutting tools, giving them a better cutting edge and longer life.

The Government said it was an essential element in the manufacture of military and naval equipment, including guns, shells, armor plate, tanks, trucks, aircraft engines and automobile and railroad equipment.

Before the alleged agreement, Government officials said, tungsten carbide had been sold in the United States by Krupp's representatives for as little as $48 a pound. After the agreement, they asserted, the price was raised as high as $435 a pound and currently is selling at $205.

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey set September 10 for pleading.

service and not more than 175 were previously on order.

The other award was to the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, of Burbank, Calif., for 410 interceptor-pursuit planes costing $30,278,787. Under the agreement worked out as to engines and propellers, the War Department will sign a contract with the Wright Aeronautical Corporation for 20,000 Wright motors, and one with the Curtiss-Wright Corporation for 14,000 Curtiss propellers—which represents the total Army and Navy requirements until June 30, 1942.

Factory expansion and machine tools required for the enlarged output will be provided by the companies at their own expense, it was said. The Navy will take such of the motors and propellers as it needs from the Army and transfer funds to the War Department to pay for them.

Camp Equipment Ordered

During the day the Army announced the award of other contracts totaling $7,952,028 for tents, cots and other camp equipment for men to be called into military service under the draft bill.

House Republicans protested against the two-day limit on debate on the draft bill, demanding a "full and free discussion such as was had in the Senate." Administration spokesmen, however, said the bill would be called up at noon Tuesday and would be open to amendment Thursday. They hope to finish by Friday night, but will meet Saturday if necessary to finish it.

The measure conforms to the bill passed by the Senate Wednesday, except for two major differences. It does not contain the Russell "draft industry" provision, written into the bill in the Senate just prior to passage, and it would register and draft men 21 to 44, inclusive. The Senate bill applies to men 21 to 30, inclusive.

Minority Report Filed

Eight members of the House Military Affairs Committee filed a minority report yesterday attacking the bill. They were Representatives Anderson, of Missouri, and Byrns, of Tennessee, Democrats, and Short, of Missouri; Arends, of Illinois; Shafer, of Michigan; Martin, of Iowa; Elston, of Ohio, and Harkness, of Indiana, Republicans.

"This proposal," they declared, "and others inevitably to follow to conscript manpower, conscript the farmers, conscript industry, conscript labor to run industry and conscript the wealth of the Nation is not only unnecessary at this time to adequate defense, but . . . it is a distinct and dangerous departure which will lead ultimately to the destruction of the American form of government in a totalitarian, military economy."

The majority report of the committee said that in view of the billions of dollars appropriated for weapons it "would be crime against the country" not to provide at the same time for "the fair and impartial training of sufficient manpower" to use and operate this equipment.

What Conscription Means to You

Officials Disapprove Student Draft Delay

By George Thorpe

(Editor's Note: With conscription a certainty, The Post is presenting a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on legislation that has passed the Senate and the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. This is the seventh article. Questions are invited.)

As the Senate, then the House Military Affairs Committee, flashed green lights for conscription, District residents ranging from college students to retired Government workers found themselves vitally interested in little-understood features of the measure.

These are some of the questions they raised, with their answers:

Question: Will students who have already completed two years of technical college courses and whose knowledge eventually would be of value to national defense be given any special consideration or will we be forced to stop our studies for a year in a training camp?

Answer: Under the Senate bill only divinity students will be exempted. According to the House bill as it stands, students in college will be allowed to finish the year, but will then be subject to conscription.

Commenting on the question, Selective Service Committee officials expressed emphatic disapproval of special exemptions or deferments for college students.

"What we're trying not to do is make this a class draft," a naval officer asserted. "If it's to be democratic we certainly can't limit conscription to the uneducated or ignorant and exempt those who have a little education."

Question: What effect has the draft on retired Federal employes?

Answer: Presumably a Government worker old enough to retire would be too old for conscription, whose maximum age limit is either 31 or 45, accordin gto the Senate bill and the House committee report. If he had retired because of physical disability he would, of course, be deferred for the that reason.

If this question is construed to inquire into the possibilities of deferment for retired Government workers, should they be in the age category ultimately decided, the answer is in the negative. Only active Government officials "necessary to the maintenance of the public health, safety or interest" would be exempted. If this person were physically qualified but over draft-age limits, he might be eligible for home-defense forces.

Question: Is a Federal building guard exempt?

Answer: Until the emergency should become acute, he is—along with policeman, fireman, etc.

Question: What kind of training is in store for me should I be called up for a year's military service?

Answer: According to present War Department plans, the conscript's year will follow this pattern:

First two months—Introduction to Army life and basic military training. During this period trainees will be brigaded with Regular troops so that they may become accustomed to Army "discipline and cooperation," selective service experts say.

Next eight months—Specialist training with instruction in the particular fields in which the conscripts will ultimately be oriented, according to their preference or qualifications.

In this, the bulk of their training term, conscripts will also be drilled intensively in unit training—in other words, in functions as a combat team.

Next month and a half—The application of previous instruction by field exercises and maneuvers.

Last two weeks—"Deprocessing" in units assigned to less active duty than in the third phase and preparations for demobilization.

Question: Am I assured of an Army term of only one year?

Answer: Not necessarily. The bill passed Wednesday by the Senate is worded "Whenever the United States is not at war, each man . . . shall serve for a period of 12 consecutive months unless sooner discharged: Provided, that if during his training period the Congress shall declare the national interest is imperiled, he may be required to remain in service . . . until the national interest permits his being relieved from service."

In other words, if you are conscripted you will serve a year if this country remains at peace. If not, you may be in for the duration.

Wife Waits Word From Broy, Hurt In German Crash

Mrs. Cecil Broy, of 4700 Connecticut avenue northwest, last night anxiously awaited news of her husband, Charles C. Broy, 53, American consul at Brussels, Belgium, who was injured seriously in an automobile accident at Bergheyn, Germany.

Louis Suissdorf, 52, American consul at Antwerp, was killed in the crash at Bergheyn, which is near Cologne, a meager report to the State Department revealed.

The report said Broy and Suissdorf were on their way back to Nazi-held Belgium from a conference at some unidentified city in Germany when the crash occurred. The latter was killed instantly. Broy is in serious condition with head and body injuries.

V. F. W. Demands Miss Perkins Quit, Bridges Be Deported

Los Angeles, Aug. 30 (AP).—The National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars adopted resolutions today demanding the resignation of Secretary of Labor Perkins and the deportation of Harry Bridges, West Coast maritime union leader.

Miss Perkins

The Perkins resolution termed her "an appointee who knows but little if any of the sacrifices made by laboring classes" and asked her replacement with "a Secretary who will have a true and accurate feeling and sympathy for the needs of American labor in the democratic processes through which American labor has gained so much."

The Bridges resolution demanded the deportation of "all other aliens whose continued residence here is an encouragement to sabotage and treason."

Among members elected to the V. F. W. National Council was Harold P. Matters, Washington, D. C.

Seattle, Aug. 30 (AP).—Representative Joseph Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican national chairman, predicted that although President Roosevelt did not accept Wendell Willkie's debate challenge, the President "will be on the stump trying to defend his position before this campaign is over."

Martin spoke at a political rally last night.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 30 (AP).—The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes was on record today with a denunciation of the Hatch Act restricting public workers' political activities.

Concurring in its executive board's report attacking the Federal law, the national convention yesterday declared the Federal Government was encroaching on State and local authority by limiting the political actions of employes of States, counties and municipalities.

The Hatch Act forbids partisan political activity by Federal employes or those of other governmental units who get all or part of their salary from Federal funds.

repeated their stated intention to demand a roll call vote on any sine die adjournment resolution. But some indicated they would favor a recess around October 1 over the adjournment period.

The House Republican conference went on record in July against any Congressional adjournment. Both Senate Minority Leader McNary and House Minority Leader Martin, who have not returned from the McNary acceptance ceremonies, have predicted their members will vote solidly to hold Congress here.

Representative Michener, of Michigan, acting minority manager in Martin's absence, said last night there had been no change in this plan so far as opposition to sine die adjournment was concerned.

But Barkley said he had received several anxious inquiries recently from Republicans on the adjournment date. On a strictly party vote, the Democrats could easily carry the sine die resolution.

Army to Raise Draft Officers From Ranks

To Call 'Noncoms,' Enlisted Men With Reserve Commissions

Hundreds of grizzled non-coms and smart young soldiers will soon exchange their chevrons for the Sam Browne belts of Army officers.

Many more commissioned officers will be required to train and command the hundreds of thousands of men to be drafted under the conscription bill and, as was done in 1917-18, the Army is turning to its experienced enlisted men and warrant officers.

Some 3,200 men in the enlisted and warrant ranks hold commissions as reserve officers, and a large number of these are to be discharged from their present status and called to active service with commissioned status, officials said yesterday. While present Army regulations bar such procedure, this rule will be suspended as soon as Congress passes the $5,000,000,000 supplemental defense bill, carrying the necessary funds, it was stated.

Most of the men to be chosen will take rank as lieutenants with Regular Army units, and some may be assigned to the National Guard, which is to be mobilized under legislation recently passed by Congress. A few of the enlisted men and warrant officers who are specialists of various types and who hold commissions as captains, majors and even higher, in the reserve, will be called in such ranks, jumping them many grades.

To avoid embarrassment, the men boosted to commissioned rank will be transferred to other stations, for the most part.

Not since the World War has the Army advanced men in the ranks in this manner. Thousands of them were promoted then, and, after the armistice, many qualified for permanent commissions. The men to be called now will serve for a year and can be reappointed annually for the duration of the emergency.

Those under 30 can compete for Regular Army commissions. If they do not qualify for permanent posts, they will revert to their enlisted or warrant rank at the end of the emergency.

Other enlisted men are trained and ready to take the sergeant's and corporal's posts to be vacated, officials stated.

Under date of August 28, the War Department notified commanders in the field of the contemplated action, stating it was dependent upon passage of then pending legislation authorizing Reserve officers to be called into service. The plan will now be carried out, it was said yesterday.

Corn Loan Rate Estimated Higher

By the Associated Press

The Agricultural Department said yesterday that present conditions indicated a 1940-41 loan rate on corn of about 61 cents a bushel, or four cents higher than the 1939-40 rate.

This would be the highest permissible under the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Officials in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics explained the law provided that when indicated corn production is below the level of normal consumption and export, but the price is 75 per cent below parity, a loan rate of 75 per cent of parity is mandatory.

U. S. Also Has 'Invisible' Paint For Planes, Firm Announces

Pigmentless Coating With Aluminum Base Declared to Make Craft 'Almost Invisible on Hazy Days'

San Francisco, Aug. 30 (AP).—Development of a paint which on hazy days makes an airplane almost invisible at 100 to 200 yards was claimed today by a San Francisco manufacturing concern.

Reports from Berlin that the British were using a so-called invisible paint on warplanes brought forth the announcement from the W. P. Fuller Co.

The new compound still is in the experimental stage but its effectiveness already has been determined, Harold Acker, company chemist, said. He described it as a flat gray, very dull, with no pigment. An aluminum ingredient provides the color.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30 (AP).—A new process of making tin plate that potentially would conserve this Nation's vital imported supply of tin for defense needs was disclosed today by the Standard Steel Spring Co. of nearby Coraopolis.

The new plate, called nickeltin, consists of half nickel and half tin and can be produced at the same cost as by the all-tin method, the company stated. It is applied in layers, first of nickel and then of tin, to steel sheets by a process of electrolysis known as corronizing.

Sidney Hillman, member of the National Defense Advisory Commission in charge of the labor division, announced yesterday he had appointed Channing R. Dooley, of New York City, as director of the program of training workers within industry.

Dooley is manager of industrial relations of the Socony Vacuum Oil Co. As assistant to Dooley, Hillman named J. W. Dietz, personnel relations manager of the Western Electric Co., New York City.

C. F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator for the commission, announced that Gustave Ring, President of Ring Engineering Co., Washington, D. C., had been appointed as a consultant on housing.

District Troops 'Retake' Hangar

5th Marines Beats 'Invaders' in Mimic War at Lakehurst

Lakehurst, N. J., Aug. 30.—The gigantic dirigible hangar here which has housed such famous lighter-than-air craft as the Akron, Macon, Shenandoah, Los Angeles Graf Zeppelin and Hindenburg was tonight technically wrested from the hands of enemy invaders.

With Lakehurst for tactical purpose located on an island, red invaders had seized and secured the hangar. The reds were represented by Marine reservists from the Twenty-third Battalion, of Roanoke, Va., commanded by Capt. Charles Nerren. The blue forces, the Fifth Battalion from Washington, D. C., under Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, were marching south from the north coast of Lakehurst Island when advised that the hangar had fallen into enemy hands and that the reds were in a hastily intrenched position on the high ground north of the hangar.

The blue forces, companies abreast, attacked the reds and drove them to the southeast. The attack was launched at 8 p. m. amid the roar of howitzers, the crash of trench mortars and the staccato chatter of machine guns, as parachute flares turned the combat areas into daylight.

The attack was an elveloping movement, Company C, under Capt.

The attack was an eenveloping the enemies right flank with Companies B and A, under First Lieut. Alfred H. Marks and Capt. Otho L. Rogers supporting the attack by fire, Company B was the blue right flank holding company, the first unit.

Early in the day the Fifth Battalion had completed its dead firing after five days of discouraging weather conditions, heavy mist, fog and a fine drizzle were not conducive to good scores. Eighty-one mm. Stokes mortars, 37 mm. pieces, rifle and hand grenades were also fired. The battalion has only to award the various competitive trophies to complete its schedule on Saturday and prepare to entrain for Washington at 10 a. m. Sunday morning.

Navy Peruses Lore of Trees For Ship Names

Novel Christenings Await New Fleet Of Net-Laying Craft

The United States Navy delved into the book of trees yesterday to find names for several new ships, and soon a group of net-layers with such euphonius names as U. S. S. Juniper, Eucalyptus, Mulberry and Teak will be riding the waves under the American flag.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, in announcing the assignment of names yesterday to 50 vessels now building or being acquired for conversion to naval use, said that 32 net-layers will be christened for various tree and shrubs, native not only to American soil but all parts of the world.

Other of the net-layers—new type vessels especially designed to lay steel nets to guard harbors from submarine attack—will be known as the Gumtree, Rosewood, Chinchona and Dogwood, as well as the more prosaic Ash, Birch, Fir, Locust and Mahogany.

Uniform naval policy of many years' standing calls for naming of all ships of a type after one group of objects. Thus, all battleships are named Hopocan, Menewa and fish, cruisers for cities and destroyers for naval heroes.

Three newly acquired tugs will be named Hopocan, Manewa and Oneka, after Indian chieftains. A recently purchased yacht will be named the U. S. S. Sylph, after the Presidential yacht which preceded the Mayflower, used by Presidents McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and Taft.

Twelve trawlers, most of them named for colleges in the United State by their former owners, will be renamed for birds. Thus the S. S. Notre Dame becomes the U. S. S. Grackle, the S. S. Georgetown the U. S. S. Linnett, the Fordham the Goldfinch, the Villanova the Bullfinch and the Boston College, the Gull.

Gen. Kilner Ends His Life by Gas

ments for his funeral and burial in Arlington National Cemetery. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Sued by Woman

Gen. Kilner, who lived at Mill River, Mass., was sued for $100,000 damages by the divorced wife of another Army officer after an alleged fist fight in a New York hotel last spring. He filed a counter suit and was in Washington to face charges of conduct unbecoming an officer brought by the woman's father, also an officer in the Army.

Retired last November 30 because of a heart ailment, Gen. Kilner was made a member of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics by President Roosevelt in January to fill the place vacated by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. He was associated with the Curtis-Wright Airplane Corporation and was a member of the board of directors of Pan American Airways.

He was born at Shelby, N. Y., July 8, 1888, and was graduated from West Point in 1912. Commissioned in the infantry, he transferred to the aviation section, Signal Corps, in 1915, and served with the punitive expedition into Mexico with the First Aero Squadron in 1916.

During the World War he built up and commanded the Third Aviation Instruction Center at Issoudon, France, largest flying school in the world. For his services there he was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal, the Order of St. Michael and St. George (British) and made an officer of the French Legion of Honor.

Assistant Air Corps Chief

He was a graduate of the Army Industrial College, the Air Corps Tactical School and the Army War College. Before his appointment as assistant chief of the Air Corps he was chief of staff of the General Headquarters Air Force at Langley Field, Va.

August 14 a press service carried a story that Brig. Gen. Kilner had filed a countersuit to the $100,000 suit of Mrs. Naidene P. Calvert, divorced wife of Col. Jay Calvert, U. S. A., who alleged the airman beat her up in a room at the Astor Hotel, New York, May 17.

Answering Mrs. Calvert's charges that he blackened both her eyes, loosened her teeth and turned the room into wreckage, Kilner claimed he had gotten the worst of the fight, and said the woman was the aggressor, according to the press service account.

Asked if Kilner had come here to appear at court-martial proceedings, Maj. F. V. Fitzgerald said he understood the War Department action was yet only an "investigation."

It was understood the investigation was precipitated by charges filed with the department by Brig. Gen. John H. Parker, Mrs. Calvert's father. The nature of the charges was not disclosed.

A pioneer Army airman, Gen. Kilner was appointed last December to the post of the powerful NACA which had been vacated by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

In Service 32 Years

However, attaches of the aeronautics committee said last night the general served only a short time with that organization. He was a counsel for the Curtiss-Wright Corporation at the time of his death.

Gen. Kilner was ordered retired by the War Department November 20, 1939, because of physical disability. He had seen 32 years active service.

A graduate of West Point in the class of 1912, he was a member of the First Aero Squadron, which was organized for service on the Mexican border in 1916. In the World War he had charge of an air training center in France and received the Distinguished Service Medal.

Before his appointment as assistant chief of the Air Corps September 30, 1938, he had served as chief of staff of the General Headquarters Air Force, Langley Field, Va., since 1936.

Gen. Kilner was a widower. He leaves one son.

the late Dr. Mark A. Matthews, pastor for 38 years, and a former moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

"The issue was premillennialist versus postmillennialism," said N. A. Jepson, a leader in opposition to Dr. Marshall's selection. "A premillennialist believes the world is getting worse, and eventually Christ will return to save it. A postmillennialist believes the word must make itself perfect before Christ will return.

"Dr. Matthews was a strict premillennialist. We believe Dr. Marshall is not. The issue has nothing to do with Dr. Marshall personally. I personally think he is a fine man."

Dr. Marshall, who is vacationing at Cape Cod, Mass., could not be reached last night for comment. He returns to his pulpit here September 8.

The Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church, said last night that most of the clergymen of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the major branch of the denomination, were postmillennialists, a trend of the last 20 years. The late Dr. Matthews, he pointed out, was of the conservative school of thought.

Willkie Insists Plant Draft Be Discussed

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, who sponsored the conscription bill in the Senate, suggested that "if we are to do all this debating" that 16 Democratic Senators who voted for the La Follette antithird-term amendment in 1928 ought to stage a debate "with themselves."

The House Rules Committee meantime agreed to permit the House Military Affairs Committee to sponsor an industrial draft amendment, in approving a rule on the House version of the conscription bill.

It was the second time Willkie had called on the President to say where he stood on the plan to permit Government operation of plants needed for defense when War and Navy secretaries could not reach agreements with their owners.

Told of Mr. Roosevelt's refusal at Hyde Park to discuss his views, Willkie, who first challenged the President on the point Thursday, said:

"If my memory serves me correctly the President has commented many times on pending legislation."

Even if the President had never done so, Willkie said it was his duty to comment, now that he is seeking a third term.

Turning to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's Thursday night acceptance speech, Willkie said both the President and his running mate were "100 per cent wrong in implying that the Republican Party is the party of appeasement." He said "the reverse is completely true" and suggested that the President read both his acceptance speech and the Republican platform.

President Roosevelt charged an attempt to involve him in political discussion in declining Willkie's demand for industrial draft comment. He said Willkie was playing politics with national defense.

He asked in turn whether reporters remembered an old rule of 1933.

Does the President comment on legislation, amendments or rules pending in Congress? he inquired.

"Sometimes he does," a reporter replied.

President Roosevelt was reminded of charges that the Atlanta architectural firm of Lawrence W. Robert, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, had received nearly $1,000,000 in fees on defense projects. The President said he had noticed a lot of smoke and if there was any proper fire behind it, he hoped Congress would go right after it.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to say whether he concurred in Wallace's statement that the Republican Party is a party of appeasement, saying his running mate's acceptance speech spoke excellently for itself. In a telegram to Wallace, he congratulated the Vice Presidential nominee on a "grand speech splendidly given before an appreciative Nation" and Wallace replied that "we have made an appropriate beginning in upholding your hand in the defense of democracy.

In Congress, Democratic leaders echoed the President's praise of Wallace's speech. Republicans followed the lead of Senator Townsend, of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial campaign committee, in charging both the President and Wallace "are going to try to scare the country into voting them into office." A Republican national committee statement commented that "Roosevelt is running against Hitler, not Willkie." Representative Short, of Missouri, said Wallace mentioned Hitler 21 times.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, started the Senate Democratic field day on Willkie by asserting Willkie was willing to permit industry to make swollen profits out of national defense, but wanted to "draft the blood and lives of American youth without the consent of the individual affected."

Both Willkie and Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, coauthors of the industrial draft amendment, challenged Willkie's assertion that no such power to draft private plants had ever before been given to a President even in time of war. They cited the Act of June 3, 1916, which gave the President the power to commandeer any plant needed in case of refusal to furnish national orders.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley took the floor as the debate dragged deep into the day to declare that if Willkie was anxious for joint debates it would be a "good idea" to debate the Russell - Overton amendment with the ten Senate Republicans who voted for it.

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, majority whip, asked his colleague not to be too hard on Willkie. Minton said Willkie had transferred his campaign to a back yard in Indiana because "his Fifth avenue apartment in New York has no back yard.

Other Democratic Senators, joining in the criticism of the Willkie statement, included Byrnes, of South Carolina; Connally, of Texas; Green, of Rhode Island; McKellar, of Tennessee; Clark, of Missouri, and Lee, of Oklahoma.

Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, closed the discussion with a declaration that it was neither "fair or decent" to attack Willkie when he was not present to defend himself.

"The Democrats have their field day today," said Wiley, "but Willkie will have his in November. Then it will be seen that the American people understand what he is talking about. He was not talking about what Senators have been trying to camouflage. He was not saying to the American people that in a great emergency, when we take manpower, we should not take wealth."

British Claim 'Biggest Defeat' Of Nazi Raids

Fourth Mass Attack On London Repelled After 6-Hour Fight

known immediately. Some fires were observed, however.

The raiders also prowled over a wide area, their drones being heard in 13 towns in England and 1 in Wales.

Early today the air ministry reported the Germans had lost 62 planes to 19 for the British during the fighting yesterday in which hundreds of planes swept to the assault on vital British plants around the capital. The British estimated the number of German planes shot down this month at more than 1,000.

As the night raid went beyond its fourth hour, a roll of bombs from the outskirts signalized the persistence of the Germans. The sky was lighted for a few moments, but the blaze didn't last long. The Germans dumped explosive and fire bombs.

The British Press Association said a hospital was hit, but it was not learned whether it was set ablaze. Another institution was fired.

Bomber Falls in Flames

In one metropolitan area machine-gun bullets, apparently intended to destroy a balloon barrage, whined down upon the streets.

A Nazi bomber, caught momentarily in the white beam of a probing searchlight, was hit heavily by antiaircraft and plunged to the earth in flames.

The raiders appeared after a day that had seen vastly heavier assaults by more than 700 planes on airdromes and industrial plants in the home counties all about the metropolis.

During the night raid on London, too, there were other German raiders over almost every section of England, bombing or scouting.

Industrial Plants Hit

The ministries of air and home security declared that no "serious damage" had been suffered by British airdromes, but acknowledged that at one town "industrial premises" were damaged and that a number of persons had been killed there and elsewhere.

The roar of Nazi dive bombers and the thud of the bombs they released in the outskirts in the third attack were plainly heard in the city's center. Two previous attacks of perhaps 400 planes were broken up after fierce aerial duels.

London's ring of antiaircraft forts set up a wall of bursting shrapnel against the invaders. British fighter defenders did the rest. Ten of them were lost.

Manchester Pounded

Nazi planes also pounded British industrial centers in the northwest, the southeast and South Wales, giving Manchester, great textile center, its worst bombing of the war.

The heaviest fighting occurred over a London suburb where hundreds of shoppers saw a force of British fighters pounce on a formation of about 25 Nazi planes. They dived and looped in a free-for-all battle which speedily split up the formation. Some of the invaders quickly jettisoned their bomb racks and fled for home. Three of them, caught in a cross-fire of British machine guns, crashed almost in the same spot.

Krupp Plant Raided

The previous night, until Friday dawn, Britain's long-distance bombers had attacked the Krupp armament works at Essen and other military targets in Germany, Holland, Belgium and France.

These attacks followed daylight forays Thursday on airdromes in German-held Holland and on convoys and shipping along the Dutch coast.

Besides the big Krupp works, oil refineries and plants at Gelsenkirchen, Bottrop and St. Nazaire were attacked; power stations at Duisberg and Reisholz, freight yards at Hamm and Soest, plants in the Ruhr district, and airdromes over a wide area also were raided.

Three British bombers failed to return.

U. S. Children Donate $135,000 for Refugees

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 30 (INS).—The Old World met the New today at a colorful ceremony presided over by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, as American school children handed over eight checks totaling $135,000 to be used in caring for European refugee children.

The money represented the contribution of 13,500,000 pennies by American children. Mrs. Roosevelt introduced Crown Princess Martha of Norway and her three children.

Missionaries Reported Killed

TWO ESCAPED WITH LIVES—Dr. and Mrs. Robert Grieve, American missionaries in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, were reported killed when Italian planes machine-gunned and bombed their isolated mission. The Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth Oglesby (inset), formerly of Pilot Grove, Mo., were believed to have been wounded in the attack. The Grieves are of Spokane, Wash.

The governor general of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, a British official, charged the Italians with "deliberate" machine-gunning of the remote missionary station.

An army communique later gave substantially the same report, declaring that Dr. and Mrs. Grieve were killed "by machine-gun fire as they ran out waving American flags."

Three boys of the Marwan tribe nearby also were wounded. A Miss Walsh, an Australian in the mission, was unharmed.

The Grieves were described here as a studious couple who began their missionary careers six months ago at the lonely Doro post. He had devoted a year to a special study of tropical diseases.

Dr. Lambie, an American who became an Ethiopian citizen and now is in process of being renaturalized, is director in the Sudan for the society, an Anglo-American, interdenominational organization.

California U. May Oust Students Opposing Defense

Berkeley, Calif., Aug. 30 (AP).—University of California students were warned by President Robert Gordon Sproul today they might be suspended from college if they actively opposed America's defense program. Referring to a student meeting called for next Tuesday to discuss the draft bill, Sproul said:

"For those who prefer to fiddle while Rome burns or to accelerate the pace of destruction by building private bonfires of their own, I shall have little sympathy. Indeed, I may find it necessary to ask some of them to defer their enjoyment of an education at the State's expense until the life and prosperity of the State have been made secure by their more patriotic fellows."

U. S. Economic 'Drifting' Finished, Asserts Wallace

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 30 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, today told the Des Moines Economic Club that the "drifting days" of American industry are gone forever.

"Some feel we should just let things drift along as we used to in the days before the World War," he said in a luncheon address, "but those days are gone forever."

"We will never see them again and neither will our children. America must realize the real significance of a world-wide change and act accordingly."

Wallace, who formally accepted the Vice Presidential nomination in a notification ceremony here last night, said the "tremendous psychic force of a militaristically dominated Germany is a political fact that dominates all economic facts."

"Ninety-nine out of 100 Americans who fail to realize its true significance must awake to its dangers."

R. A. F. Bombs Set Fires Over Berlin

The air-raid alarm lasted an hour and 37 minutes.

A business building housing a print shop and other industries was reported hit.

The raiders came in waves, possibly in several groups.

At least one was caught in searchlight beams flying at comparatively low altitude. This plane released a bomb which landed two blocks from the Associated Press office in the center of the city. No fire followed this explosion.

Another machine appeared headed for the southeast district lighted by the first fire.

Antiaircraft batteries opened with a terrific fire and shell splinters rained over the city.

Tracer bullets lanced the air, following the direction given by searchlight beams trained on spots in the sky from which the hum of motors appeared to come.

It was announced officially three persons were injured severely and three others slightly wounded.

Communications Cut

Antiaircraft was in action for several minutes before the sirens sounded the alarm.

Authorized spokesmen said the targets hit would be announced as soon as a clear picture could be formed of what had happened.

Communications with the outside world were cut off in order to avoid giving the fliers a clew to direction by radio waves.

From Dover to Eastbourne, the Germans report, fights developed often at a tremendous altitude. The fighting today, according to German reports, was particularly intense, with individual engagements lasting 5 and sometimes 10 minutes. Most of the planes shot down in the course of these engagements were reported to have fallen into the sea about Dover.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 30.—German air bases along the Channel coast were alive with activity this morning, for the weather was reported clear, and large formations of Air Marshal Goering's bombers with their protecting pursuit planes and destroyers took off to raid the British Isles.

The British fliers evidently immediately came out to meet them, for the Germans report large-scale air battles in the course of which their fighters shot down 80 enemy planes with a loss of only 21 machines themselves.

Today's German raids were concentrated on southern England, particularly on bases of the Royal Air Force in Hampshire. An enemy flying field at Farborough, near Aldershot, was one objective of the German bombers. Here they are reported to have rained a number of bombs on barracks and halls, destroying several British planes which did not have time enough to take off.

As the German machines departed from Farborough, en route home, they were pursued by enemy fighters which succeeded, near Hastings, it is reported here, in bringing down one of the attacking bombers. Nonetheless, the Germans add, their machines, flying at very low altitudes, strafed a number of enemy antiaircraft batteries on the way home, putting them out of commission.

Red Army, Fleet Practice Offensive

Moscow Views With 'Cool Detachment' Events in Balkans

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 30.—Realistic Red army drill in "offensive tactics" in a special western military district and maneuvers of the Red fleet in an unidentified sea were disclosed today while Russia viewed with an attitude of cool detachment the newest movement of borders in the Balkans.

The Soviet Union was awaiting Rumania's reply to two protests charging Rumanian border troops with "provocative actions" on the Soviet-Rumanian frontier—protests which warned of the grave consequences which any future trouble might bring.

Some Discount Seriousness

However, some diplomatic sources expressed the belief this situation was not now serious. They said Rumanian frontier guards had been ordered to keep the peace strictly during the Vienna territorial negotiations which today resulted in the loss of approximately half of Rumania's province of Transylvania to Hungary. Demarkation of the new Russo-Rumanian border by a mixed commission is expected to begin shortly.

Nevertheless, foreign observers took interested note of the fact that the Soviet Union's armed forces were tuned up to the alert, both on land and sea.

The western army maneuvers (there was no indication of their exact locale) were conducted under the eye of the commissar of defense, Marshal Semen Timoshenko. Theoretically under fire, the troops marched 30 miles, then crossed a river on pontoon bridges under an artillery smokescreen and with the protection of the air force.

Press Remains Objective

The fleet maneuvers, disclosed by the naval organ, Red Fleet, began with submarines scouting out theoretical enemy bases, thus permitting warships to take to the sea for a mock battle. Again, there was no hint of where this was happening.

Russia's attitude toward the Rumanian-Hungarian trouble, as reflected by the press, was entirely objective. Only factual reports, minus comment, were published.

Carol Is Guarded After Ceding Land

tory and people by hostile neighbors within a space of ten weeks, Rumania was shrouded in mourning tonight. The government suspended all forms of entertainment including dancing, music in public places, theaters and movies.

Not unless Russia's attitude should become "antagonistic" would either German or Italian troops set foot on Rumanian soil, it was stated reliably.

The guarantee of Rumania's new frontiers was contained in an exchange of notes among Germany, Italy and Rumania at Vienna after conclusion of the Transylvanian agreement.

Rumors abroad of imminent occupation of Rumania's border with Russia by German troops were scoffed at by high officials.

"Why would Rumania agree to cede a great part of her territory to Hungary if the Germans were going to make a military camp out of Rumania anyway," asked one government leader. "The rumors are ridiculous."

(In Berlin, an authorized spokesman described as "nonsense" the rumors of a German march to the Rumanian-Russian border.)

The guarantee as regards Rumania's newly defined Bessarabian and northern Bukovinan border with Russia was of paramount interest to Rumanians because of recent clashes on land and in the air between Russian and Rumanian forces.

With half of Transylvania lost, it was understood that a final decision would be reached soon on Bulgaria's claim to southern Dobruja Province, slicing off 8,979 square miles of territory and 906,588 population.

When this is completed, postwar Rumania of 113,884 square miles and 19,535,938 population will have been reduced to about 60,000 square miles and presumably about 10,000,000 population.

Accord's Provisions

As reported here the agreement surrendering the territory involves:

1—A new frontier fixed by a map agreed on by the Vienna conference, the final regulation to be left to a Hungarian-Rumanian commission.

2—Rumanian troops will withdraw from the ceded territory within two weeks.

3—All Rumanian subjects living in the ceded territory will obtain Hungarian nationality, but, if they desire to be Rumanians, they must adopt their new nationality within six months and leave the newly acquired Hungarian territory within a further fixed period.

4—Hungarians of Rumanian nationality who lived in Transylvania before 1919—when it belonged to Austria-Hungary—may choose Hungarian citizenship within six months.

5—Hungary and Rumania each will assume a "solemn guarantee" to give equal rights to national minorities of the other country left within their new boundaries.

6—Any difficulties or disagreement in carrying out the agreement will be settled directly by Rumania and Hungary, failing which they will appeal to Germany and Italy for a "final ruling."

7—German and Italian pledge to protect the new frontiers of Hungary and Rumania.

8—A separate minority agreement between Rumania and Germany whereby Rumania gives her German minority "equality in every way" with Rumanian subjects and permits them to practice Nazi principles.

The New Boundary

The cession of the territory to Hungary sets up a new frontier between the two countries about as follows:

From a point southwest of Nagyszalonta (Salonta) on the present Hungarian-Rumanian border, it runs in a northeasterly direction along a line about 7 miles southwest of Grosswardein (Oradea), which is about 10 miles deep in Rumania.

The new border then runs easterly just south of the Grosswardein-Klausenburg Railroad. From the railroad it travels southward past Klausenburg to a point about 24 miles north and northwest of Neumarkt, then to a point southwest of Neumarkt, leaving the Sighiscara-Brasov Railroad in Rumania.

About 13 miles northeast of Brasov the boundary turns eastward in an arc facing southward and running to the main divide of the Carpathian Mountains.

The boundary will run along the divide in a line coinciding with the pre-World War frontier of Hungary-Rumania to a point reaching the new Soviet-Rumanian frontier.

Bulgars Expect Cession

Sofia, Bulgaria (Saturday), Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Rumania has agreed to surrender all of southern Dobruja to Bulgaria, it was reported reliably early today.

Reports from Craiova, where Rumanian-Bulgarian negotiations have been under way, said that the Bulgarian occupation of Dobruja probably will occur simultaneously with Hungary's occupation of Transylvania.

The cession of southern Dobruja to Bulgaria, involving about 5,000 square miles and about 360,000 people, virtually will restore the frontier as it existed in 1912, before the second Balkan war.

London's Comment

Copyright by The New York Times.

London, Aug. 30.—Reaction to the Balkan agreement here is that Rumania has given in to German pressure and produced another problem which will have to be settled when or if the British finally win the war.

"Rumania thought it in her interest some weeks ago to renounce the British guarantee and to put her trust in Germany," said an inspired comment tonight. "The result has been that Germany almost immediately started to exploit and fleece her. Such has been the fate of other countries who put their faith in Germany and it is to be wondered whether, in the long run, Hungary will herself derive any advantage from the Axis powers."

Permanent, Berlin Feels

Copyright by The New York Times.

Berlin, Aug. 30.—The arbitration of Vienna, German quarters note with satisfaction, has "solved the last and most difficult problem of revision in Danube territory." The permanency of this solution, in the German view is assured by the joint Italo-German guarantee of the integrity of the Rumanian state—the inviolability of its new borders.

British Down Pilot 'Big as Goering'

A Southeast Coast Town, England, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—British airmen reported today that they had shot down a German aviator of apparently high rank who was "big enough to be oGering." Field Marshal Hermann W. Goering, No. 2 Nazi, is chief of the German air force.

(In Berlin, Nazi spokesmen declined to reveal Goering's whereabouts, but said "he is in better health than ever").

The body, taken from a German bomber shot down into the sea, could not be identified because of facial burns.

The dead airman wore many decorations and carried a snapshot of a woman and two children which had been sent from Switzerland, it was reported.

Greece Calls All Reserves, Watches Italy

Parliament to Meet In Albania Today; Attacks Expected

By the Associated Press.

Athens, Aug. 30.—Greece called up substantially all of her reserve officers tonight, while informed quarters were predicting that Italy might use a projected session of the Albanian Parliament tomorrow for new denunciations of this pro-British country.

Greek officials said the meeting would be watched anxiously for some sign of Italy's intention toward this kingdom. The Fascist press has carried on a violent press campaign against Greece, alleging that the Greeks now hold territory rightfully belonging to Albania. That country is now a part of the Italian empire.

The reservists were called up for service September 11. The scope of the summons will make it possible, said military observers, to put the nation completely under arms within a few hours. Some reserve classes already are in service.

House Passes Virgin-Wool-Marking Measure

A bill requiring manufacturers of woolen garments to show the amount of pure and reclaimed wool in their products was approved by voice vote of the House yesterday.

The measure, which passed the Senate in different form, now goes to conference.

An all-day fight against the bill was led by Representative Boren (Democrat), of Oklahoma. In his minority report Boren charged that the measure would mislead the public because "many poor products are made of new wool and many superior products are made of reprocessed or reused wool."

The bill was originally introduced in the House last year by Representative Martin (Democrat), of Colorado, who died in December.

Under its terms, manufacturers are required to show the percentage in their products of pure "virgin" wool, of reprocessed wool, of reused wool and of other fibers as well.

Declaring that workers', farmers', women's and consumers' organizations favored the measure, the Interstate Commerce Committee's majority maintained that through the required labeling of wool products, "the purchaser will at least know whether the garment came off the backs of animals or of humans."

Ninety per cent of the American people must purchase suits costing $25 or less, the committee asserted.

"The legislation is not needed for people who can pay $75 or $100 for a suit of clothes," the committee added. "It is the workingman, the farmer, the millions of clerks and office workers and the great miscellany of employment in the lower income brackets who need protection."

On the other hand, Representative Boren and the minority of the committee charged that wool growers were backing the legislation in the hope of a resulting rise in wool prices. The minority declared that cotton producers would be injured because "100,000,000 pounds of lint cotton is used annually in the manufacturing of mixed fabrics."

Mrs. Ernest William Howard, legislative chairman of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, was quoted by the majority in support of the bill.

Rumania Capitulates

Berlin and Rome have made a pretense of settling the dispute between Rumania and Hungary in the spirit of just and impartial arbitration. Foreign Minister Ribbentrop goes so far as to assume that the division of Transylvania will produce lasting friendly relations between the Rumanian and Hungarian governments.

More impartial observers see in this hasty settlement, however, only the creation of a new minorities problem. Reports indicate that approximately two-thirds of Transylvania will go back to Hungary. The Magyars' claim upon some of this territory is certainly as good as that of Rumania. But the dictators' spokesmen who met in Vienna have not drawn the new border along ethnographic lines.

According to the Hungarians' own figures, the area to be taken over will include 1,300,000 Rumanians. Other estimates place the number of King Carol's subjects who may now become a minority in Hungary at 1,800,000. No boundaries drawn in this area could separate the different nationalties in an entirely satisfactory manner. Yet talk of justice has no place in the description of a deal which removes so large a group of Rumanians from the country of their choice.

The transfer of population on a voluntary basis will be permitted. To a limited extent that may relieve the severity of the new minority problem which has been created. To the same extent, however, it will impose cruel hardships on individual families.

The fact is, of course, that the emissaries of Hitler and Mussolini did not meet at Vienna to bring about a humanitarian adjustment of the Rumanian-Hungarian dispute. Their object was to force a settlement on Rumania so as to keep peace in the Balkans. The very fact that the so-called arbitration award was worked out, and the Rumanians were compelled to accept it in a conference lasting less than two days, indicates the nature of the compromise.

More than ever the governments at Bucharest and Budapest are now under domination by the Axis. If the Rumanians accept King Carol's latest capitulation without an uprising, one danger of war in the Balkans will be minimized. But it can by no means be assumed that this turbulent area has been stabilized.

Germany is reported to have guaranteed the new Rumanian boundaries. So far as the Rumanians are concerned, that pledge is worth about as much as Hitler's guarantee to Czecho-Slovakia after Munich. Yet in this instance the Third Reich is doubtless determined to stop Russian encroachment at the new Soviet-Rumanian frontier. German and Russian troops may soon be face to face in this disturbed area. What the outcome will be is doubtless a mystery in every European capital.

The Place To Start

Senator Overton's suggestion that the District obtain more revenue to finance new schools and other capital improvements will be warmly indorsed by many civic groups. As a means of obtaining such funds, however, the reduction of needless operating expenses is certainly preferable to any new tax program.

Upon the basis of the findings of Griffenhagen & Associates, Representative Kennedy stated two years ago that the operating costs of the District government could be cut $3,000,000 through the enactment of his proposed reorganization plan.

While this figure was challenged, the reorganization plan was never put to a test. The House District Committee at first agreed to compromise amendments to the original Kennedy bill and then permitted the legislation to be pigeonholed because of minor objections on the part of President Roosevelt.

Revenue legislation must originate in the House, but there is nothing to prevent Senator Overton from sponsoring District reorganization in the Senate. As he is both chairman of the subcommittee on appropriations and a member of the District Committee, he is in an excellent position to take up this problem where the House left it.

Senator Overton has observed that District operating costs have grown steadily, while capital improvements have lagged in recent years. Enactment of additional taxes under present conditions, however, might have the effect of increasing the taxpayer's load without compensating improvement of municipal services.

The House, moreover, has been definitely hostile to proposed local sales taxes and to any further increase in the Federal payment. Representative McGehee's plan to tax vending and pin-ball machines may add to the District's income but hardly enough to accomplish the improvements Senator Overton has in mind.

So the first step toward the desirable goal which Mr. Overton visualizes seems to be reorganization of the hodgepodge local government in the interests of economy and efficiency. Even if savings effected in this way should prove to be small, the gains in community service would probably be substantial.

Essential Adjustment

By passing the Burke-Wadsworth selective service bill the Senate has proved itself capable of thinking in new terms about the gigantic national problems now pressing for solution. In the end, that flexibility of judgment may prove far more significant than the inauguration of compulsory military service.

Congress had previously manifested a flexibility of judgment in approving President Roosevelt's arms-building program. A majority of our legislators realize that our major national problems are quite different from what they were a year or even three months ago. National defense has suddenly become an inescapable necessity that overshadows all the issues with which the Nation was chiefly concerned before the war in Europe began to jeopardize our security.

Both the Administration and Congress are attempting to meet this emergency with vigorous measures to increase our military and naval strength. But the enormous task of adjusting various other policies to the new situation is not yet being faced in a courageous way either at the White House or on Capitol Hill.

A noteworthy case in point is the continued expansion of WPA employment above the seasonal low point reached last month. If present plans are followed, further substantial increases will be made in the rolls during September, October and the winter months, until a new peak is reached in February. In other words, the WPA is planning to spend all the funds allotted to it by Congress during the first eight months of the present fiscal year. A deficiency appropriation would then be necessary to keep that work-relief agency going from March to June.

It is unquestionably true that a large number of families are still in need of public assistance. But it is also true that an increasing number of men who have been idle are now finding employment because of the defense program. Moreover, large numbers will doubtless soon be drafted for military training. So the demand for jobs is being relieved in very considerable measure by activities of the Federal Government outside of the WPA.

This fact alone would justify a sharp curtailment of WPA activities. For it must be remembered that the Government has never undertaken to care for all the unemployed. The WPA has offered only a limited number of temporary jobs to relieve the pressure for relief upon the States and local communities.

Of much greater importance is the fact that the Federal Government must now devote its major energies and a far larger portion of its budget to national defense. The rearmament program is putting an enormous burden on the Federal Treasury. It is not yet possible to estimate with any degree of accuracy the billions that will flow into our preparedness activities during the next few years. But the sum will be enormous. And the Administration has devised no better means of financing the program than continued borrowing from the public.

In these circumstances it becomes imperative to shift back to the States and local governments a larger share of the relief burden which Congress, in recent years, has lifted from their shoulders. It is true that Congress gave the WPA authority to spend its entire fund in eight months if that should prove necessary. But since that vote was taken, the outlook for employment has greatly improved and the Federal budgetary situation has become much worse.

These circumstances impose upon President Roosevelt the plain duty of instructing the WPA to spread its present appropriation over the entire year. If no political campaigns were under way, such an obviously desirable adjustment of responsibilities could probably be taken for granted.

The Green Sickness

Whatever else you may think about these maids and matrons in uniform who call themselves the Green Guards of America, Inc., there is certainly no sentimental shilly-shally about them. Not for them to let "I dare not" wait upon "I would."

These ladies who, in the true spirit of the times, have been so industriously schooling themselves in lethal arts and crafts, now accuse the whilom leader of their Washington garrison of a grievous breach of discipline. Accordingly, they have proceeded to court-martial her in spite of her refusal to recognize their authority.

The stern stuff of which these Green Guardswomen are made is shown in the very nature of the charge against Mrs. Werner—namely that she has been talking too much and too loosely. In ordinary times this might sound like accusing ducks of getting themselves too wet.

All the same, the national generalissimo of the Green Guards, Mrs. Virginia Nowell, continues her efforts to put Mrs. Werner on the spot. Nor does the fact that Mrs. Werner has already resigned make any difference.

Happily for Mrs. Werner, the Green Guards, notwithstanding all their diligent rifle and small arms practice, have as yet no firing squads.

The curious thing is that Mrs. Werner's objection to the Guards seems not to be their martial fervor and iron discipline. Rather she fears that these qualities are not untinctured with sordid motives of material gain. This is like accusing the noble Penthesilea of running the bank in an Amazonian blackjack game.

Happily for the public, denouement of this strange business is not to be left to the Green Guards' court-martial. The district attorney promises a "thorough investigation" of this latest outburst of frantic "patriotism." We have little hope, however, that even the district attorney will untangle the quirks of human nature which turn so much energy into fantastic bypaths in time of emergency.

An Invented Issue

In his speech accepting the Democratic nomination for Vice President, Secretary Wallace declared that democracy and Americanism are identical. Both, he said, "are utterly opposed to totalitarianism with its exaltation of might, its suppression of freedom, and its claims to racial supremacy." Because that is true, it is impossible to take seriously Mr. Wallace's dark warnings that failure to reelect Mr. Roosevelt would jeopardize our democratic institutions.

Mr. Wallace says that "in the opinion of the world—in the eyes of the Nazis and the stricken nations under their heel—Roosevelt has become the symbol of democracy." But that is true only because Mr. Roosevelt is President of the most powerful democracy in existence today. A successor would have at least as much prestige, for he, too, would be the representative of the American people.

It is not necessary to stress the President's hatred for the oppressive dictatorships of Europe. The sincerity of his feeling is not open to doubt, even though there was talk of executive dictatorship in those halcyon New Deal days when Congress rubber-stamped Administration measures on first reading. Mr. Wallace's bland assumption of the President's indispensability is calculated to revive the smoldering suspicions of those earlier critics and stiffen opposition to third-term aspirations.

The President's running mate is simply letting his imagination run riot when he asserts that "every evidence of opposition to Roosevelt within the United States has been reason for rejoicing in Berlin." He puts a further strain upon his inventive capacity by warning that a Republican victory in November would result in economic concession after concession to the totalitarian countries under pressure from sinister apostles of appeasement.

It is evident that Mr. Wallace is trying to make an issue of foreign affairs when there is really no division of opinion. The people are united as seldom before in their desire to strengthen our defenses against dictator powers and antidemocratic influences. That desire antedates the advent to power of Mr. Roosevelt, and it may be confidently said that it will be no less strong after he has laid down the cares of office.

Mr. Wallace would have us believe that Mr. Roosevelt has been working busily for years to save us from the machinations of Hitler and his agents. That, of course, is plain poppycock. As late as 1936, on the occasion of a Jackson Day dinner, the President blithely asserted: "We are at peace with the world; but the fight goes on. Our frontiers of today are economic, not geographic. Our enemies of today are the forces of privilege and greed within our own borders."

The effort to present Hitler as the chief stumbling block to achievement of domestic reforms, until recently the all-absorbing concern of the American people, flies in the face of the evidence. But it provides Secretary Wallace with a convenient excuse for failing to accept the President's suggestion that he explain his agricultural program to the American people. A successful defense of that program would require a degree of dialectic skill that would put a severe strain upon even so adroit a speechmaker as Mr. Wallace.

"My Fair Lady!"

A Letter in the Detroit News

Isn't it about time all we Tommy Bridges fans got together to get a little action from the team on the day he is working? I think he should refuse to pitch until he has the support of the rest of the team. Last Friday's game was the worst exhibition of bad sportsmanship I've ever seen. How could they expect to win Sunday after making Bridges the goat on Friday?

I'd like to see the Tigers win the pennant, but how will they do it unless they give each pitcher the same backing and play no favorites. Let's have more letters for Bridges. MRS. JOHNSON.

How's this for a recruiting slogan? "If you want to join the Navy and see the world, you'd better hurry."

Merit Tests

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Civil Service Commission announced recently that it soon will give another examination to stenographers and typists. In view of this statement, it is hoped that some of the Rip Van Winkles in that commission will awake from their deep lethargy and inform the public why the same people are required to take the same test time and again, while others are exempt from taking anything, except their salaries, which, in many cases, are several times what they should be.

There have come under my close observation people who said they had passed an examination but who could not do their daily work well, yet they received increases in pay. Is it not odd that anyone (though wonders never cease) can do better work when taking a test than when he is more relaxed? Most examinations are simply endurance tests for many highly capable people. Even court reporters have been known to fail.

One of the best ways of determining an employe's efficiency is to send his work to a competent, impartial taxpayer. The public should say whether it prefers someone who can do his best on an examination which lasts from 3 to 4 hours or one who can do excellent work every day in the year.

There comes to my mind a certain stenographer who has been under the merit system for years but who can hardly type a line. And this statement is not a hyperbole. It may be to the interest of the public to find out before it is too late just why employes are not classified for the work which they can do best. Only recently the assignment of a stenographer was changed to a clerk, although that employe had had no clerical experience. She later was dismissed. And while she asked different ones in charge of that department and also wrote to the Civil Service for an explanation she has received no reply. T. E.

Awaits Call

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since conscription is to be the law of the land, I am expressing myself and, by so doing, expressing, I believe, the thoughts of thousands of young men who are in the same category as I.

At 26, I am profoundly proud to be an American. I have been a fan, so to speak, of the "pros" and "cons" of this bill, for I have heard and read many thousands of words on both sides of the issues. Consequently, I am not speaking as one who is completely ignorant of the facts, but rather as a citizen of these United States who understands them and will, in all probability, be called with the first quorum of men.

I anxiously await this call, for it is an opportunity to show my appreciation to my country for its freedom and tolerance—the only nation in the world today where these two virtues are still practiced.

I feel flattered to know that I am a potential soldier of the armed forces of the United States and should the worst come, I shall feel honored to be able to die for these United States.

I think that my attitude on this momentous issue is shared by thousands of young men in all fields of endeavor and in all walks of life. We are not reluctant to prepare for the defense of our country but, rather, are glad for this minute opportunity to aid our country in this tangible way.

Conscription is the direct exercise of our democracy to protect itself, and its being put into effect shows that God is blessing America in these chaotic times.

Fears For Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "I never . . . uttered a word indicating the opinion that the supreme authority in a State ought to be entrusted to the majority of citizens . . . in other words, to the poorest and most ignorant part of society. I have long been convinced that institutions, purely democratic, must, sooner or later, destroy liberty, or civilization, or both."

The foregoing quotation might be from a source sympathetic to the nations under dictatorship rule, but it is from the well-known letter written in London, on May 23, 1857, by Lord Macaulay to Mr. Randall, of New York.

At this time, the quotation has a double significance to us. It calls our attention to the plight of democracy in Europe and to the most momentous test of democracy in the United States which our Government has ever encountered. Will it withstand the onslaught? Do the people grasp the influences which are attacking the foundation of democracy in the United States?

The most insidious and potent of these influences is the destruction of a sense of fidelity to the public trust of preserving the treasury and solvency of the Federal Government. We pretend to heed the craving of the vast majority of our people to keep out of the European war, yet we propose to draft millions of our men, and we vote billions of our credit beyond all rational defensive bounds.

We subordinate the essential quality, which must be produced by physical and mental training, to an hysterical display of numbers and dollars. We play politics. We need, promptly, within the bounds of time required for training, a highly trained defensive army, of manageable numbers; but every step beyond that requirement tends to defeat our needs and further violate the trust of preserving our solvency.

The mass idea must unceasingly be subordinated to the quality idea. Besides the disruption of our normal life, the attempt to draft and train too large an army will defeat, or impair, the effective training of the army which we really need.

It is unfortunate that this issue should be blended with the more domestic issue in our democracy of a third term in our Presidential office, which deserves the entire attention of our people. We would vote overwhelmingly against any proposal to subvert our democracy, by direct action, but that is not the way we may expect it to be assailed. What we have to fear is indirect, gradual destruction.

That is the kind of destruction of which Macaulay warned. We are not ready to despair of democracy, but there is enough in the situation abroad and at home to cause us concern and to arouse a craving to see the democratic zone clarified and purified by a breath of fresh air.

GEO. MASON DILLARD.

Scottsville, Va., Aug. 27.

Warning To Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The time has come to sound a clear word of warning to the isolationist Senators at Washington. If they continue to block urgently needed action, the people will rise in vast rage and sweep them into oblivion. They are living in a self-created, fantastic dream world, utterly at variance with the present deadly reality. THAYER LINDSLEY.

A Reply To Westbrook Pegler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish that Westbrook Pegler would stop calling the union that I belong to a "transmission belt" or "auxiliary" of the Communist Party.

It doesn't make it nice for me with my friends and neighbors who read that the American Newspaper Guild is Communist-controlled to know that I am an officer of the Washington Newspaper Guild. If they believed that stuff they would justly view me with alarm and tell their children not to play in my yard. My views at the meetings of my citizens' association would be looked on with jaundiced eyes and the minister of my church would regard me as one who stands in the need of prayer. All this distresses me very much because my union is not controlled by Communists.

A thorough search of the membership of the Washington Newspaper Guild would not disclose more than a corporal's guard of Communists or Communist sympathizers. We have had contracts with all of Washington's daily newspapers for some years now and our relations have, on the whole, been amicable.

I do not know of anyone in Washington who has been compelled to join the guild. I do not believe that Washington publishers know anyone who has been compelled to join the guild on their papers. They bargain with the guild for wages, hours and working conditions of their employes. I am sure that they do not staff their papers with a majority of Communists or with the type of people who submit to Communist control. This same condition exists with publishers in other cities who bargain collectively with their employes.

Washington has a collection of the best newspapermen in the country. Most of them are members of the guild and they don't like Pegler's insinuations any more than I do.

I have been an active part of the opposition to the present administration of the guild for some time. I oppose them because they meddle into affairs which are no concern of a union to the detriment of its members. I propose to oust them by a vote of the members. Pegler wants everybody to resign. Pegler makes a lot of money and doesn't need to join hands with his fellow employes and bargain collectively with management. He doesn't like unions and wants to destroy them. I sometimes wonder why.

Of course, some stupid actions of our paid officials have given Westbrook, the union hater, some excuse for damning the whole organization. For example, they sent our local executive committee a letter asking for us to take a stand on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill. They had already announced opposition to it. By a vote of 9 to 1 we told them to take no stand on the bill—that legislation of this nature is none of the business of a union.

Does this sound like we are Communist-controlled? Of course not. We are loyal, patriotic American citizens who organized to bargain collectively with management. Nothing more. I can lick Pegler.

BARNEY B. TAYLOR.

Washington, Aug. 28.

War Hysteria

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is regrettable that young Mr. Gibson, present Senator from Vermont, appointed to succeed his late father, has seen fit to indorse the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

Current hysteria about the imminent danger of Germany's invasion of our shores is perhaps more disturbing to one that does not clearly recall the events of 1917. Substitute the name of the Kaiser for Hitler and the mass psychology was the same. The emotionally unstable looked for lurking Germans behind every haystack, and at night under the bed.

Speeches such as that of young Senator Gibson helped inflame the popular imagination and to drag us into the war which was destined "to end war" and to "make the world safe for democracy." This was the war that we helped to win.

If our national peril is so acute and immediate as pictured, how about drafting wealth as well as men? A little more stress on this subject would be both seemly and timely.

And if production of armaments has bogged down for lack of incentive why does the Government not conscript the needed industrial plants and manufacture what is needed without profitable contracts?

T. H. RUSSELL.

Louise At Luray

COUSIN LOUISE got home Saturday midnight from her trip to the beautiful Caverns of Luray and the Skyline Drive. I sat up in bed to hear about it, because it was Saturday and I knew I could sleep late next day. If I didn't let her tell me now, I would never get more than brief snatches before something reminded her of something else she had seen. Louise says herself that everything she sees reminds her of something else. Next day she would be up to her neck in some new adventure and the Luray Caverns would be almost forgotten. (Since she came to Washington on her vacation the place has taken a new lease on life. Things had gotten pretty drab and routine, if you know what I mean. But looking through Louise's new eyes, all is color and excitement.)

"I've been seeing America perpendicularly," she announced, kicking off her shoes and removing her hat. "You know I was up in the Monument the other day, over 500 feet, and now I've been nearly 300 feet underground. Words simply fail me," she continued breathlessly. "I saw an idiot writing in the air with his finger."

"In the Caverns?"

"Oh, no. It was in a little town where we stopped for coffee. There was a funeral outside the church and I had to walk between the cars to get to the bus. Is that bad luck? Where we stopped for lunch I sat with the nicest girl. She's a secretary to a medical writer and she had fried chicken and four desserts."

"I think you exaggerate," I remarked coldly.

"No, really. She began with cantaloupe a la mode and had a fruit salad and sherbet and ended up with apple pie. Besides chicken and bread and butter and vegetables and milk. And she simply floated afterward. I don't see how she did it," she added enviously. (Louise is rather plump.)

"The caverns, Louise," I prompted.

"Oh, yes. Well, there were animals in there, and people and saints and flowers and vegetables and turkish towels and blankets and bacon hanging up, a streak of fat and a streak of lean, and fried eggs as plain as anything."

"You're making it up."

"No, I'm not. Everybody saw them. We were trooping down steps into an abyss with crags and chasms and draperies and indirect lighting and I was thinking about Dore's illustrations for 'Paradise Lost' and the guide said, 'This is Dante's "Inferno".' There was a big white tulip in the ceiling, and an enormous eagle. We didn't walk under it. The guide said the river made all these things and then went away; but you know one thing I don't believe the river made nearly all the animals had eyes in the right place. What do you think?"

Without waiting for what I thought, she continued: "There was a string of fish and Dream Lake with stalactites mirrored so beautiful I could hardly bear it. And we had to go through a sort of crack called Fat Man's Misery, sideways, and I was nervous for fear I'd get stuck, but I didn't even touch. And you know how my legs nearly faint coming up these stairs? Well, in the caverns the air is so pure, or something, I just flitted up and down those chasms and things without even noticing it. Once the guide turned out the light so we could see how dark it was and now I know what it's like to be blind. I didn't like that, but I wasn't scared any of the time like I thought I'd be. (Like I was in the Monument.) I knew lots of people had been there and got out, because I saw bits of cellophane and chocolate wrappers and tinfoil and a cigar butt. It sort of spoiled the effect of being in an enchanted land, but it was reassuring just the same.

"The Skyline Drive was grand too. I was in the middle of geography. There was a lovely hotel perched up on the rim of the valley and two middle-aged ladies were sitting on the terrace with their backs to the scenery, knitting. Imagine! I'll tell you the rest tomorrow."

She crawled into bed and reached up and turned out the light. I thought she was through, but she had something to add.

"Coming home the best-looking man got on the bus and passed right by a gorgeous blonde sitting by herself and came and sat with me. I asked him why."

"Louise, you didn't!"

"Yes, I did, too. We got to talking and I told him I was going to be a writer [this was news to me] and when I couldn't understand something I just asked him. I asked him why he passed her by and sat with me.

"He said [there was a puzzled note in Louise's voice] that he was just too tired to sit with the blonde." MARJORIE THORN.

On The Power To Commandeer For Defense

THE RUSSELL-OVERTON amendment to the conscription bill was adopted by a vote of sixty-nine to sixteen. It provides that in case the Army or the Navy are unable to reach an agreement with a private contractor for the manufacture of things they need, the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy may commandeer the plant, leaving the question of compensation to be determined by condemnation proceedings in a court of law. The amendment was introduced in the very last stages of the Senate debate, and it may be that after closer scrutiny in the House and in committee it will be found desirable to improve it in detail. But to describe it as stupendous, staggering and revolutionary, as setting up "potential dictatorship," as a proposal to "socialize and sovietize our system of free enterprise" is not, it seems to me, a considered and illuminating contribution to the debate.

For the power of government to acquire private property for public purposes through condemnation proceedings is as old as the Common law; it is a power exercised somewhere in the United States every day in the week in order to build highways, school houses, parks and other public facilities. In war and in peace the power is inherent in all government and certainly it is available where the national defense is the public purpose for which private property is condemned. All that the Russell-Overton amendment does, if I read it correctly, is to make the property available at once, letting the courts fix the compensation at their leisure, whereas usually there is a long law suit before the property can be used. What is so staggering about that? Moreover, the power to commandeer in the interest of National Defense has long been a part of the settled policy of the United States under the National Defense Act: over a period of more than twenty years Congress has repeatedly affirmed the principle as being necessary and inherent in time of national emergency. Surely it will not be maintained now by Mr. Willkie that no national emergency exists when he himself advocates conscription, or that the Senate does not think there is a national emergency when it adopts the conscription of men by a vote of fifty-eight to thirty-one and reaffirms the power to commandeer property by a vote of sixty-nine to sixteen.

NOR IS THERE any substance to the contention that this power is likely to socialize and sovietize our system of free enterprise. On the contrary it will help to preserve it. For the fact of the situation is that the great majority of businessmen in the country are quite ready to work for the national defense, renouncing any ambition for big profits, asking only reasonable protection against the risks. But in every community there are some men who put personal profit first, who seek private advantage for themselves while their competitors are doing public work.

These recalcitrants have to be brought into line—not only because the Government needs their services, but as a protection to patriotic businessmen, and because they cannot be allowed to set a demoralizing example to the rest of the community. The fact that the Government has the power to commandeer will bring them into line, for the most part without the necessity of exercising the power. And if in certain cases the power has to be exercised, it will be the courts and not the President or the Secretaries of War and of the Navy who will adjudicate the property rights affected.

Indeed, nothing would more seriously impair the regime of private property and the system of free enterprise than to permit a recalcitrant minority among business men to obstruct the national defense. Nor is it in the interest of property or of free business or of the conservation of the capitalist system to take the position that while men may now be compelled to serve the country, property may not now be compelled to serve it.

THE TRUTH of the matter is that if the "two-ocean Navy" and the great airforce and the enlarged Army are to be realized in fact, the Nation will have to dedicate itself wholeheartedly to the business of national defense. The program which Congress is authorizing requires a prodigious national effort, and no one should deceive himself into thinking that it can succeed on the notion that any one or every one can conduct his private affairs as if no emergency existed.

The very essence of the national effort consists in the obligation of all citizens to serve the Nation rather than themselves, and when the great majority are serving, no minority may resist or refuse. That is the principle of the Russell-Overton amendment, and the Senate would have been derelict in its duty if it had not adopted it.

Doctor's Odyssey

"THE FIRE AND THE WOOD" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50), R. C. Hutchinson's new novel, has a touch of the quality of "Arrowsmith," some of the suspense of "Escape," and is the kind of full-bodied novel one has come to expect from Mr. Hutchinson.

For this is the story of a Jew from the Polish border who came to Harzinnfeld with a passion to carry on research in polyvalent tuberculin, and met, first, institutional routine, and then the blight of Nazi racism. It is also the story of the awakening of a doctor who hardly knew whether his patients were man or women; of Minna, the tubercular housemaid who was at first no more than a guinea pig to him, and of the doctor who gave Minna's life a dignity and a meaning that had seemed outside its scope. And it has those singing overtones and sudden insights which, appearing in Mr Hutchinson's story of a German boy in the desperate post-war years, "The Unforgotten Prisoner," published six years ago, marked Mr. Hutchinson for distinction among the younger English novelists.

Josef Zeppichmann wasn't marked out for greatness. He was a little too careful about detail; he went about the hospital with something of the air of a faithful dog. Neither patients nor nurses loved him; and his colleagues gave him only grudging respect. But, in his student years he had worked out a formula which seemed to work with rats, and he was determined to try it out on human beings. The routine of the hospital gave him no opportunity.

Somewhere in a newspaper—though Dr. Zeppichmann paid little attention to newspapers—he had read a phrase used by a political speaker; "The individual does not matter. It is the many we have to think of." The phrase had stuck in his mind; but he gave it another color from that intended by the Nazi orator. He remembered a story his father had told him of the great World War; how a division commander, as a birthday present for a general, sent a party of 150 men out to capture a useless point on which the general had set his heart. Twenty-two had come back. Joseph Zeppichmann wanted only one life to play with: one fairly useless life that he might restore or might possibly destroy.

I leave it to the doctors whether a test of a serum on one scullery maid would have much meaning to the medical profession. Mr. Huchinson establishes at least that it meant much to Josef, and that his records of the effect of his treatments upon Minna were to him the most precious thing in life. Minna was only an individual, but if she lived, thousands of others might be saved. Minna grasped that faith. When the new regime in Germany ousted Josef, as a Jew, from his hospital post, and sent him to a concentration camp, Minna felt herself a part of a great mission for humanity. The story of Minna's hunt for Josef, and of her fantastic flight with him to England, has the epic dignity of the heroism which may grow where heroism is least looked for.

IT IS A STORY with many, perhaps too many, heroes. There is Dahlmeyer, the old musician at the concentration camp, who steeled Josef to courage on his arrival. Josef was a bit inclined to sign whatever the camp masters bade him sign. There was nothing to be gained by refusal, he thought; they would "prove" it against him one way or another. "That's not quite right," said Dahlmeyer. "You can't prove something that isn't true." They could take his watch, his picture of his wife, Dahlmeyer said, but there was something inside him that they had never been able to seize. "What they really don't like about us," he said, "is a certain quality of our minds. We recognize things for what they are. That's what they mean by our 'arrogance,' and because that quality of mind is one they can't get for themselves, their one idea is to destroy it in us."

There were others in that murky Germany who preserved, in some degree, that quality of mind. . . . But some of the best scenes in the book are those in which Mr. Hutchinson pictures the need of lonely individuals for a kind of comradeship. Some found it in Nazi troops; others in Communist cells. Josef himself felt it curiously one night when, quite without intention, he had been involved in a street fight and had his collarbone broken. Bruised and aching, he yet knew that the evening had for him been a good one.

'Squeeze Play' Beats Rumania

Berlin, Aug. 30.—The following joint announcement by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Italian Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano on the Vienna arbitration award was issued tonight by D. N. B., official German news agency:

The Royal Rumanian government and the Royal Hungarian government petitioned the German government and the Royal Italian government to settle by arbitration award the question pending between Rumania and Hungary apropos territories to be ceded to Hungary.

On the basis of this petition and on the basis of the declaration which the Royal Rumanian and Royal Hungarian governments made in connection with this petition, to consider such arbitration award as binding without any reservations, German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and the foreign minister of His Majesty the King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia, Count Galeazzo Ciano, after renewed conversation with the Royal Rumanian minister of foreign affairs, Mimail Manoilescu, and the Royal Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, Count Istavan Csaky, today at Vienna rendered the following arbitration award:

First. A definite border between Rumania and Hungary is the line marked in the attached map. The exact delineation of the frontier on the spot is left to a Rumanian-Hungarian commission.

Troops Must Leave in Fortnight

Second. Hitherto Rumanian territory thus ceded to Hungary will be vacated by Rumanian troops within a fortnight and will be handed to Hungary in orderly condition. Various phases of the evacuation and occupation as well as additional modalities thereof will be immediately fixed by the Rumanian-Hungarian commission. The royal Rumanian and Hungarian governments are obliged to take care that evacuation and occupation are carried out in a quiet and orderly fashion.

Third. All Rumanian citizens who today have their domiciles in areas to be ceded by Rumania automatically are becoming Hungarian citizens. They are entitled to opt within a period of six months for Rumanian citizenship. Persons availing themselves of the right to opt must leave the Hungarian state within an additional 12 months' time and are accepted by Rumania. They may take with them their movable property. They may further liquidate their immovable property and take with them proceeds derived from such liquidation. In case they are unable to liquidate their property, they must be compensated by Hungary. Hungary will treat all questions resulting from the resettlement of optants in a broad-minded and conciliatory fashion.

Fourth. Hungarian nationals who now are Rumanian citizens living in areas which in 1919 were ceded by Hungary to Rumania and who now are living in territories remaining Rumanian are entitled to opt within six months for Hungarian citizenship. For persons availing themselves of this right, the same provisions as stipulated in the previous article are valid.

Fifth. The royal Hungarian government solemnly assumed the obligation to grant persons assuming Hungarian citizenship by this arbitration, but who are Rumanian nationals, in every respect the same rights as Hungarian citizens. The royal Rumanian government assumes the same rights as Hungarian nationals of Rumanian citizenship who remain in Rumanian territory.

Sixth. Regulation of all other questions resulting from the change of sovereignty is reserved for direct negotiations between the Royal Rumanian and Royal Hungarian governments.

Seventh. In case difficulties or doubts arise during effectuation of this arbitration award, the Royal Rumanian and Royal Hungarian governments will discuss such cases in direct negotiations. If they cannot agree on any issue, they will submit these issues for definite settlement to the German government and the Royal Italian government.

Background of Arbitration

The following protocol also was issued as an annex to the award:

During the conversation which took place at Vienna August 29 and 30 between representatives of Germany, Italy, Rumania and Hungary about the problem pending between Rumania and Hungary concerning territory to be ceded to Hungary, representatives of Rumania and Hungary, on their authority as plenipotentiaries, requested the German government and the Italian government to settle the problem by arbitration.

Representatives of Rumania and Bulgaria declared at the same time that their governments would consider the arbitration award as binding and without any reservations.

German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano thereupon on behalf and on instruction of their governments, declared themselves willing to meet the request of the Royal Rumanian and Royal Hungarian governments and, after a renewed exchange of views with Rumanian Foreign Minister Manoilescu and Hungarian Foreign Minister Count Csaky, pronounced the requested arbitration award today at Belvedere Palace, Vienna, which was attached in copy with annexes to this protocol and handed same to representatives of Rumania and Hungary in duplicate text in the German and Italian languages.

The Rumanian foreign minister and Hungarian foreign minister took cognizance of the arbitration award and its annexes and, on behalf of their governments, once more confirmed the declaration that they were accepting the arbitration award as a definite settlement and pledging themselves to execute same without reservations. Made out in the German and Italian languages in four originals. Vienna, August 30, 1940.

Now, Mrs. Roosevelt!

"I finally discovered a way to drive from Hyde Park to Westbrook without going through New Haven. New Haven has always been difficult for me to drive through. Invariably I lose my way or don't see a red light and am admonished by a policeman. In fact, I think I have a complex about New Haven, for I am sure to get into trouble there."—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in "My Day."

Tush, tush, Eleanor! How you go on!

It's mostly imagination. The traffic rules are pretty confusing at points, especially at the junction of George, Church and Meadow, where a traffic cop stands in the middle of a circle demonstrating that it is possible for a man to sleep standing up, but there's nothing tough about New Haven. Mrs. Coolidge used to get through okay. And Mrs. Taft lived there for years without any motoring tribulations. You just can't forget the time Patrolman Mike Holly held you up for passing a light some years ago. Mike was only doing his duty "as he seen it," and he'd be all busted up if anybody walked up to him and said sternly, "See what you've done! You've given Mrs. Roosevelt a complex about getting through New Haven!"

Invariably you lose your way, you say, or don't see a traffic light. Why, Mrs. Roosevelt, what were you ever doing driving through New Haven on the way from Hyde Park to Westbrook anyhow? You must have been lost in the first place. But since you did drive through it, we've just got to insist that the routes are well marked and that there are so many traffic lights, missing 'em is a real trick. It has 'em at almost every intersection, including those where nobody's been seen crossing the street in years.

If you said you had trouble getting through because of the parked car nuisance in New Haven, that would be something, as New Haven permits folks to drive in and park their jalopies in the main streets cheek to cheek day and night. There are autos in Crown street that have been there since Jack Studley was mayor.

Everybody back home is all upset by your crack about the town, Mrs. Roosevelt. Chief Phil Smith is thinking of going over to Willkie, and Mayor Murphy, who's held the office for the Democrats longer than anybody on record, is sore enough to go Republican. The chief insists his traffic police are as courteous a group as you'll find anywhere and that their admonishing percentage is ten point two below the admonishment level of any police force in the United States.

Mayor Murphy says he will give you a handicap of three red lights from now on. You won't be eligible for admonishment until you have passed your fourth straight red light. Isn't that fair, Mrs. Roosevelt? The mayor just wants to hold you as a visitor.

P. S.—You've heard the old story, Mrs. Roosevelt, of the autoist who got lost and accosted a native sitting on a rock.

"Is this the main route through here?" the autoist asked.

"Dunno," was the answer.

"Where do I get onto Route 25?"

"Dunno."

"Can you tell me where the shore road is?"

"Dunno."

"Say, you don't know much of anything, do you?"

"Nope. But I ain't never been lost"

"Passengers on Clipper Ship Lined Up and Searched."—Headline. Maybe that's where they get the word "clipper."

In a freckle contest in New York, three boys were found to have faked their freckles. The spirit of individual competition in this country is not, as alleged, dead.

When Ima Dodo heard about the big strike of painters, she asked, "What color?"

Salvage contracts are being signed at the New York World's Fair and Elmer Twitchell has made an offer for models in ice.

Hi: I never heard of the "Conrad" automobile, but among the early models I remember was the Apperson Jackrabbit the White and something called the Grant. And whatever became of the Rausch-Lang the Dart and the Locomobile. GUS THE BUS.

Aces In Congress

By Mark Sullivan

Usual Sprinkling of Two-Spots, Too

THE HEART of the conscription bill, as passed by the Senate August 28, is this: Every male "between the ages of 21 and 31" is required to register. The number thus registered "shall be liable for training and service in the land and naval forces of the United States." Out of the total 12,000,000 registered and liable, up to 900,000, about 1 out of 13, will be selected. These 900,000 will actually be "inducted into the land or naval forces (including aviation units) of the United States."

The House bill (with some variations from the Senate's) goes now before the House. The House consideration is expected to consume a week to ten days. If the House passes the bill, there will be conferences between the committees of House and Senate to adjust differences between the two versions. Thereafter comes final action by the two bodies on the agreed-upon measure. The concluding step is action by the President, who undoubtedly would sign the bill.

ALL THIS is on the assumption the House passes the bill. If the House does not pass it, conscription will be "out."

The debate in the Senate—it consumed 14 days—has been followed by the writer of this column. By "followed" I mean that every page of the record has been scanned, much of it read carefully. The debate included many extracts from testimony of Army officers and others, given before the Senate Military Affairs Committee—some of the extracts used by advocates of the bill, to prove their argument; others by opponents to prove their side. The debate was very thorough and was of high quality. It was, in the judgment of this writer, the American form of government—that is, government by representatives, democratically chosen—functioning as well as any American Congress ever functioned, as well as any parliamentary body ever functioned anywhere.

This judgment is emphasized, just because it runs counter to much that has been printed and said. This judgment is important because the very existence of government by Congress or other parliamentary body is in peril everywhere—in country after country, parliamentary government is succumbing to one-man government. This is important to remember because the carping at our own Congress—sometimes thoughtless, sometimes subtly and malevolently intended—imperils the existence or the constitutional functioning of our own representative government, feeds the tendency toward dictatorship.

EVERY GENERATION criticizes its current Congress, says that Congress has degenerated, points nostagically to Congresses of the past, points to Webster, Clay, Calhoun, and asks why have we none like them now. There is an Irish proverb, "Far-away cattle have long horns." So do long-ago Senators have great minds. We accept the elevation of a Webster because we meet him in a $3 book of history; we miss the elevation of a present Senator because we see him in the headlines of a 3-cent newspaper. This is a universal human tendency. Antony and Cleopatra is an exalted drama because we meet it in classic literature and history. But every newspaper reader and radio listener has witnessed in our own time a drama analogous in interest and as much greater in proportion as the British Empire is broader than Rome—the abdication of a British King to marry a young woman from Baltimore.

My own impression is that the average of any one Senate is about as high as the average of any other. Any group of men, such as the Senate, is like a whist hand or a deck of cards. It contains a certain number of aces and kings and a certain number of two spots and trays, together with a complement of fives, sixes, nines and so on. In history, the aces survive, the mediocre are forgotten. But for each Webster and Clay there were corresponding two spots.

THOUGH the two spots lose out in history, they strut conspicuously in contemporary print. In the public accounts of the Senate debate on conscription, more attention was paid to about three two spots than to some of the aces and other high cards. If there is fault here, the fault is not in the Senate but in imperfect sense of values on the part of newspapers and commentators. We should not let this obscure our judgment about the supreme value of representative government and the especial present need to cherish and preserve it.

Groups of men, such as Congresses average about the same. What sometimes seem differences in Congresses may be due to difference in the Presidents who bring pressure upon them or whom Congresses tend to support. Individual Presidents, like all other individuals, differ greatly. In other countries, dictators differ greatly. Government by a succession of dictators over a series of years is likely to be the worst possible government. Government by representatives, by groups, is better.

First Six-Week Defense Training Course Ends Here

There were no ceremonies yesterday as the six-week course ended in vocational training, conducted in connection with the defense program. The men completing the course and going out into jobs—40 per cent of the 500—left the school shops for those in industry.

The remaining members, who have completed the training but have not mastered the course, will continue in the new course beginning at midnight Monday, September 2. The sessions for eight-hour students hereafter will be held at night, from 12 to 8 a. m.

The classes are held at Abbot, Phelps and Chamberlain vocational schools and McKinley and Armstrong high schools.

Classes for workers desiring to improve their skills will open September 23, running from 5:30 to 9:30 p. m.

Lumber Prices Increasing As U. S. Plans Troop Quarters

Survey Reveals Prices, Particularly Southeastern Types, Are Jumping Although Government Owns Great Block

Just as the Government is preparing to order immediately 650,000,000 feet of lumber, and planning in the coming year to buy perhaps 4,000,000,000 to 5,000,000,000 feet to build troop cantonments and other defense works, lumber prices are increasing spectacularly.

At the same time, the Government is the owner of 660,000,000 feet of lumber, left over from the New England hurricane of 1938, which many lumber dealers believe would stabilize prices if it were released on the open market.

People who sell and use lumber are, consequently, pressing the Government to sell some of its large wood holdings. Very little has been sold so far, it is said, because the Government bought the wood at high prices and has been holding it in the hope of higher prices, which have only now just occurred.

A survey by The Post reveals that prices, particularly of Southeastern types used heavily in this section, are jumping up as much as $2 and $3 per thousand feet in a single day.

Typical Examples

The result is that wholesalers and retailers of lumber fear that their usual commercial lumber trade, which goes into construction of homes and other normal channels, will shrink and wither away.

Here are typical examples of what has happened to lumber prices within the last two months:

Short leaf pine 6-inch roofers, air dried, cost $24 per thousand feet on July 1, f. o. b. Washington. August 1 the price was $25.50. Today the price is $33.

Pine roofers are a good gauge of what has happened to other lumber prices. For instance, 1-foot roofers are up $5 per thousand feet, grade B and better flooring are up $10 per thousand. Fir is up $4 since the first of the month and Ponderosa pine, also widely used in this section, has increased $5 this month.

Lumber brokers in the South are advising their outlets in the North that they will not quote prices more than a few days ahead, and in some cases turning away orders.

A typical letter from a Georgia broker, dated August 22, reads in part:

"It is impossible to give you any information regarding prices that would be safe for you to use in taking orders. By the time that you could get the orders and get them to us, the price would probably advance, and there would be a further advance before we could get them placed. Have never seen a condition like the one at this time."

Reason Sought

Caught in a swirl of rising prices just when they thought national defense would help business, lumber dealers are looking hard for the reason for their troubles.

They find three possible reasons:

The first, and perhaps weightiest, factor is the huge demand that the Government is going to have for lumber to build cantonments and other installations.

John W. Watzek, jr., lumber expert for the Defense Commission, has announced that the Government now needs 650,000,000 feet for the Army and Navy, much of it to house troops, and defense needs for the next 12 months will consume between four and five billion feet—almost one-fifth of current annual lumber production of 28,000,000,000 feet.

Lumber experts believe that announcement of this Federal purchase program has stimulated some panic buying and price-raising.

Another factor, however, especially strong below the Mason-Dixon Line, is that the wage-hour division has just yesterday rounded out the second month of an intensive drive to make the lumber industry comply with the minimum wage standard of 30 cents an hour and with the maximum hour ceiling of 42 hours per week.

Drive in Full Swing

The enforcement drive has made employers liable to payment of back wages totaling $307,038, the greater part of which has been paid.

The drive is just now in full swing in Georgia and Florida, where much of the lumber used in this section comes from. That fact, officials believe, may explain in part the tone of letters received from Southern lumber brokers.

The third price factor is the Government's stock of 660,000,000 feet of hurricane lumber, held by the Northeastern Timber Salvage Corporation, an RFC subsidiary.

Of this amount, 330,000,000 feet are sawed, the rest is in wet storage pools in log form.

The Government has $13,000,000 tied up in this lumber and so far has sold only 30,000,000 feet. All sales have been commercial, virtually none have been to other Government agencies.

Many representatives of the lumber industry feel that the way to cure the unruly price situation is for the Government to use the hurricane wood it already owns in building the troop cantonments that it now plans to construct with lumber bought in the commercial market.

Treasury Eases Ban on Remittances To Invaded Lands

By the Associated Press

The Treasury yesterday authorized a resumption of personal remittances of money by Americans to friends and relatives in the invaded European countries.

These remittances were blocked by decrees of President Roosevelt issued since April 8 restricting the movement of money to or from each of the invaded countries—France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, Denmark, Norway, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

The new regulations permit remittances only by persons, however, who have lived in the United States continuously for more than one year and who had been making similar remittances for at least six months prior to April 8.

The payments also were limited to a maximum of $50 for any one person or $100 for any one family, per month. Evidence that the money is intended only for necessary living expenses also will be required. The transfers would be made through local banks instead of the Treasury.

Dies Subpenas Books and Records Of Nazi Library

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 30.—The German library of information, which occupies offices adjoining the German consulate here, was visited this afternoon by agents of the Dies committee, who subpenaed the library's books, financial records and all of its correspondence.

Among the records subpenaed was a mailing list said to contain more than 70,000 names and addresses of persons and business concerns in the metropolitan area. Use of the names had led to protests.

The subpena, served on Dr. Nathias Schmitz, library director, directed him to produce a list of the employes and all records concerning its activities including Facts in Review, a weekly tabloid presenting Hitler's speeches, official German communiques and articles on disputed events in Europe.

BALLROOM BARNYARD—Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, of South Carolina, guest at yesterday's clinical session of the veterinarians' convention, meets Betsy, who came from the Beltsville (Md.) Experimental Farm Finished with operating on 2 cows, 2 horses, 5 sheep, 7 dogs, 63 chickens, 6 pigeons and 8 turkeys in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom, swankiest environment a dog ever took ether in, the American Veterinary Medical Association adjourned its seventy-seventh annual meeting here yesterday.

The strange clinic, crowding the dance floor with a barnyard menagerie for science's sake, was viewed with interest by Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture.

"This has gotten so far beyond me I can believe anything," he said, while a dog took a general anesthetic for an appendectomy.

The operation was accompanied by explanatory remarks through loudspeakers. Dogs do have appendicitis, it seems. The appendix in animals is called the caecum. Animal appendicitis is caused by an invasion of the caecum by a long, very thin worm, thickened at one end and gradually tapering off into a long, fine filament for a tail, known as the whipworm. The dog, anestretized, slept. Dr. John D. Gadd, of Towson, Md., gave the demonstration.

A cow was fed medicine through a stomach tube by Dr. Edwin J. Frick, department of surgery and medicine, Kansas State College; a demonstration of a simple way the veterinarian can examine sheep at the time of autopsy and better diagnose parasitism was given by Dr. C. A. Woodhouse, of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Groups Merging in 4 Fairfax Methodist Congregations

Following the trend of the now-united Methodist Church, each of the four churches of the Fairfax (Va.) Methodist circuit is merging its women's organizations into united congregational groups, each called the Woman's Society of Christian Service.

Rev. Maxwell

Representing a consolidation of the former Ladies' Aid and Home and Foreign Missionary societies, the new set-up will bring a large number of women into united programs in the churches, and is expected to greatly advance the general program of the whole circuit.

The society at the Andrew Chapel Church, near Tysons Corner, staged an election Wednesday, and the Fairfax church group held its election Thursday. The election at the church in Centerville will be held on September 25, and at the Pender Church on September 9.

Officers of the Andrew Chapel Society are Mrs. C. M. Stoy, Vienna, Va., president; Mrs. Marvin Sanders, Vienna, vice president; Mrs. Marvin Kirby, McLean, recording secretary; Mrs. Willard Oliver, Vienna, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Earl D. Sanders, McLean, treasurer.

Fairfax Society officials choseen were Mrs. Roy B. Allder, president; Miss Eleanor Chesley, vice president; Miss Marie Cobb, recording secretary; Miss Bernice Cupp, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Howard W. Stull, treasurer.

Also the following secretaries: Mrs. John M. Whalen, missionary education and service; Mrs. R. J. White, social relations and local church activities; Miss Reba Cupp, women's and girls' work; Miss Bernice Cupp, children's work; Miss Mary Chesley, literature and publications; Mrs. E. S. Whiting, supplies, and Mrs. C. C. Carr, student work.

The Rev. R. Carl Maxwell, under whose leadership since 1936 the circuit has made consistent advances, said yesterday he is looking forward to another successful season, one of the highlights of which will be the Fourth Quarterly Conference on September 4 at Andrew Chapel, when annual as well as quarterly reports will be heard from the four charges.

Auditorium Renovated

The Fairfax circuit is now engaged in a building program, which is expected to be completed by the time the Virginia Methodist Conference convenes in Roanoke on October 15.

Most of the present project is being centered at Andrew Chapel, where the auditorium has been completely renovated, and the basement is being converted into space for six separate Sunday school classrooms, and an assembly, social and dining hall. An electric automatic oil burner to heat the entire church is being installed.

The entire job there will cost about $4,300, according to the Rev. Mr. Maxwell, who explained it is being financed through cash contributions, pledges and sales of church bonds.

Iron-Man Duty

The clergyman conducts worship services at Andrew Chapel at 11 a. m. on the first and third Sundays of each month. The Epworth League, headed by Albert Elgin, meets at 7 p. m. on the second and fourth Sundays. Earl D. Sanders is Sunday school superintendent, and Alton Money is church treasurer.

Doing iron-man duty on a job that carried him 20,000 automobile miles in 1939, the Rev. Mr. Maxwell leads worship services each Sunday at 11 a. m. at the Fairfax Church; at Pender on the second and fourth Sundays at 7:30 p. m., and at Centerville each Sunday at 3 p. m.

E. M. Wiley, pastmaster at Fairfax, serves as Sunday school superintendent of the Fairfax Church; John M. Whalen, clerk of the court there, is church treasurer, and Emory Chesley, Epworth League leader.

Officers of the Pender Church include Alvin Birch, Sunday school superintendent; F. M. Allder, church treasurer, and Sterling Swart, Epworth League president.

Achievements Listed

Edward F. Cross serves as Sunday school head at the Centerville Church, and Miss Alline Belcher is league president.

Among the achievements of the Rev. Mr. Maxwell since he became pastor of the circuit have been an expenditure of more than $12,000 for church and parsonage improvements, a healthy membership increase and, in the Fairfax Church, installation of a two-manual Everett Orgatron, with chimes.

The Rev. Mr. Maxwell received his theological training at Randolph-Macon College and the Candler School of Theology, Atlanta, and he served pulpits in Roanoke, Monterey and Luray, Va., before coming here.

He and Mrs. Maxwell have three children, Mrs. William Giese, of New York City; Mrs. Richard E. Batway, Denver, and a son, Raymond Carl, jr., student at Strayer's Business College here.

Conference to Be Held At Western Maryland College, Westminster

More than 400 men and women will attend the nineteenth annual conference of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association this week-end at Western Maryland College, Westminster.

Representing many walks of life and scores of classes in the Washington Metropolitan area, they will leave today by bus and car for the rolling campus near the Pennsylvania State line, one of the most popular spots in the East for religious meetings.

Arriving, their immediate task will be registration in the campus business and postoffice, where John A. Patterson, jr., and Edward Tolson, sr., both of Calvary Baptist Church, and energetic association officials again will be handing out keys and conference material.

Unfortunately, John A. Patterson, sr., who is visiting in Wisconsin, will be unable to take his familiar place at the registrars' office, where he, his son and Mr. Tolson have registered delegates at the association's conference for thirteen consecutive years.

After an afternoon of recreation, the sessions will formally open with a fellowship dinner with Dr. Fred G. Holloway, host college president, and H. C. McClintock, of Elkton, Md., president of the National Federation of Men's Bible Class, as speakers.

A song service, led by William R. Schmucker and with Mrs. Page McK. Etchison as pianist, will open the sessions at 8 p. m., when the annual memorial service will be held and special musical selections presented.

Dr. Frederick Starm, minister of the Radio Pulpit, and pastor of the Clinton Avenue Community Church, Brooklyn, then will present one of his three addresses on the conference theme of "Life and Personal Religion," speaking on "Our Commitment to God." He also will address services tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. and the closing session on Monday at 3 p. m.

Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, professor of systematic theology at the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., and former pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, will deliver the conference sermon tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. Vice President Alden W. Hoage will preside.

Arthur R. Bodmer, director of adult work, Pennsylvania Sunday School Council of Religious Education, at 10:15 a. m. tomorrow will lead a forum on Bible class work, methods and organization. George E. Harris, executive secretary of the association, will preside. The Bible class sessions are set for 9:15 a. m., with Vice President Noah R. Robinson in charge.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Few kings have left a better legacy to the Christian church than King Robert II who gave us this great hymn. We are told that he loved the service of chorister more than his kingly service, and often went to the Church and in his royal robes with his crown on his head would direct the choir.

Count de Chambrun Off On Clipper for U. S.

Making 3d Flight in as Many Months, Descendant of Lafayette Is Bringing His Wife, Daughter of Vice Premier Laval

MAKING HIS THIRD transatlantic clipper flight in as many months is Count Rene de Chambrun, who embarked for the United States yesterday, according to word from Lisbon. Of particular interest to Washington is the announcement that this time he is bringing his wife, the former Marie Jose Laval, daughter of French Vice Premier Pierre Laval.

Following close on the young French couple will be the new Ambassador from the Petain government, Henri Haye. The latter is at Lisbon awaiting clipper passage and is expected here the middle of next week. The retiring envoy, Count de Saint-Quentin, will leave town immediately after his successor arrives, and probably will return to France before assuming his new duties as Ambassador to Brazil.

Assigned last June as air attache here, Count de Chambrun is evidently not returning to the Capital in the same capacity; an embassy official said yesterday that he has not been named to any post here.

Came to Capital On Honeymoon

The 28-year-old countess was in Washington in 1935 on a much happier occasion — her honeymoon. Shortly after their marriage in Paris five years ago the couple sailed for this country, stopping in the Capital briefly before going out to Rookwood, the Longworth estate in Cincinnati. The count, of course, is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth's nephew. His mother, Countess Adelbert de Chambrun, is the former Clara Longworth. His uncle, the Marquis Pierre de Chambrun, who also has an American wife, was the only one of 300 French Senators to vote against the abandonment of France's democratic government after the surrender.

Countess Rene de Chambrun's first trip to this country was made in 1931, when her father, then premier, conferred with President Hoover. At that time she made a big hit at the many official dinners given for her father. The younger set had a chance to meet her at a dance which the then French Ambassador, Pierre Claudel, gave at the embassy. The countess is small, dark, chic and attractive.

Count Is Ardent Baseball Fan

As a direct descendant of the Marquis Lafayette, Count de Chambrun enjoys honorary American citizenship. An ardent baseball fan, he can tell you the scores of league matches years back. Before leaving to fight with the French forces he practiced law in Paris. Count de Chambrun was in the thick of the Battle of Flanders and was sent to this country afterward to relay important military information to President Roosevelt. It was while he was a guest on the Presidential yacht that news came of the resignation of Premier Reynaud, preparing the way for France's surrender.

After working at the embassy for a while, Count de Chambrun took the clipper back to France.

Anne Elizabeth Lyon Presented At Outstanding Virginia Party

THE HUNT COUNTRY'S first debut party of the late summer season took place last night when Miss Anne Elizabeth Lyon was presented to society by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moncure Nelson Lyon, at their estate, Black Oak Ridge, near Purcellville.

A natural platinum blonde, and one of the beauties of Virginia, the deb looked particularly lovely in an exquisite gown of white lace and net. From the many flowers sent her Miss Lyon chose to carry an old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias and baby's breath.

From the drawing room the guests spilled out onto the back lawn, where a covered platform dancing. Chairs were arranged had been built and softly lit for on the terrace for "sitting out," but most of the young folks preferred to dance continuously to Bob Riley's orchestra. At 12:30 a delicious buffet supper was served.

Remembered Here As Marsyl Stokes; Sails From India

Somewhere on the Red Sea, en route to England from India, are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Montgomery-Cherrington. The former before her marriage this year was Miss Marsyl Stokes, and is known here as a popular debutante of the 1937 season.

Mrs. Montgomery-Cherrington is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, who, as Miss Margaret Fahnestock, was a Capital belle 20 years ago. Mrs. Drummond-Wolff and her husband have been in Newport for several months, and are a bit concerned over Marsyl's welfare, as she is expecting her first child. Mrs. Montgomery-Cherrington is the daughter of Sylvanus Stokes, of Annapolis, and the niece of Snowden A. Fahnestock, of Washington and Newport, who gave a large dinner before her debut party at the Rhode Island resort several summers ago.

After the death of her grandmother, the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Capital grande dame, Marsyl always stayed here with her godmother, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan. In England when the war broke out, she immediately became an ambulance driver. When she announced her engagement, her fiance was with the British troops in Egypt, and the couple were married in Cairo last February.

Mrs. Montgomery-Cherrington has a younger sister, Miss Vivian Stokes, who is with Mr. and Mrs. Drummond-Wolff at Newport.

Daughter of Yale's President Parcels Out WPA Artists' Work

IT'S THE JOB of youthful Betsey Seymour, daughter of Yale University's president, to supervise the progress and output of the District's WPA artists. Her title is director of the art unit's allocations gallery, and she does everything from tacking buckram on the gallery walls to distributing the paintings through schools, hospitals, libraries and social agencies.

She deems the unit's contribution to art in the schools one of its most important phases. "It used to be that all you ever saw on school walls were reproductions of old masterpieces," she says. "They were considered safe and properly academic. But actually they have no relation to modern life. Through the pictures we loan to schools, the children come in contact with living contemporary art as well."

Frequently the 55 artists now with the unit are commissioned to do specific jobs. Among such assignments are paintings of school buildings and portraits of prominent Army figures, ordered by the War Department. In addition to painting, the unit has facilities for lithographing, ceramics and picture-framing.

For lo! These many baseball broadcasts, housewives have been setting their clocks by Arch MacDonald's G-L-O-F-F-I-N watch ("Keep loafin' with Gloffin"). They'll be perturbed to learn that there is not and never has been any such watch. It's just a MacDonald whimsy, a name he thought up some years ago and uses wherever it comes in handy. The payoff is that a watch manufacturer has heard about the hoax and decided to capitalize on it by making a watch for Arch to sponsor. So by the end of the baseball season there may be a real Gloffin. Arch plans to put it over with such brand-new slogans as "With men who know watches best, it's Gloffin one to nothing."

TIPS ON MARKETING

From the District of Columbia Department of Weights and Measures

When you buy canned goods, do you note the quantity of contents indicated on the label and compare it with the quantity you usually receive for the same price? Or do you think of canned goods as coming in large, medium and small cans? About 150 different sizes of cans are now in use. The District weights and measures law requires the manufacturer to state the quantity of contents on the labels of all cans and other food packages. By paying attention to the labels you can protect yourself and your pocketbook from misleading quotations and so-called "savings" which are not savings at all.

Ann Sheridan's Shoulders Hailed

Hollywood—The shoulders of Ann Sheridan are photographically perfect, in the opinion of George Hurrell, Warner Bros.' photographer.

And to preserve their perfection Ann practices two daily exercises she says will beautify the throat and bosom as well. This is what you do:

Hold the arms akimbo, then forcibly press the fingertips together, holding them as far away from the chest as possible.

Swing both arms in a complete circle.

Follow these exercises with a spray of ice cold water over the chest and shoulders, using a faucet tube. This firms the contours and refines the skin texture.

Custom Made Clothes Enhance Modern Schoolgirl's Wardrobe

A distinctive frock for back-to-school wear is the brown and white checked corduroy pinafore on the miss above. It's interesting detail will appeal to the mother who has initiative and skill with the needle

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor

SCHOOLGIRLS will jump for joy if they can be made to feel that their classroom wardrobes have been just as carefully planned as the grown-up ones assembled for sending "big sister" off to college. One short cut into the affections of the grade-schooler or the teen-ager is the collection of new frocks, custom made to her own specifications.

Sounds expensive? Not at all, for children's clothes are simpler to cut and easier to whip up than they have been for some time past. The prices involved are far from prohibitive, too, for the little grade school student is the luckiest member of the family in that she can wear inexpensive cottons year round to classroom and stay right in the peak of fashion.

Pinafores Are Back

The pinafore jumper is a perfect example of cheap wintertime cottons and is the biggest style news among those easy-to-make clothes mentioned. Actually a complete wardrobe of school outfits could be assembled with the cotton corduroy jumper alone as the basis. A couple of jumpers might be of sturdy corduroy with a couple more of pinafore types in cotton velveteen paired, with an equal number of blouses. And throw in one or two sweaters or guimpes for quick-change acts.

The printed corduroy jumper is smartest for juveniles and will make classroom news even if her marks don't. Some of the new fine wale corduroys now in the yard goods departments are striped in tiny impressionistic flowers spattered with dots. Classic honors go to shepherd checked jumpers combined with plain jersey for the blouse, almost a duplicate of grown-up sister's.

Jumpers Easy to Make

A jumper is known as the A B C of dressmaking and the inexpensive new patterns make the sewing of these simple school outfits easier than learing the A B C's. Beginners' patterns include complete instructions for the even gathering of pinafore skirts, while sewing machine attachments do really fool-proof gathering. For instance, a cunning little heart-shaped pocket is just as easy to make as a plain one, due to an edge-stitcher which gives a firm finish.

Mary Haworth's Mail

While Prayfully Grateful for Boy's Devotion, Girl Shrinks From His Kisses; Why Is This?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl aged 20, and for two months I have been going steadily with a boy aged 21, whom I have known over a year. He says he is very much in love with me and speaks of the time when we can be married. He has two more years of college, and we are agreed that it is important for him to graduate, so we know we cannot be married for two more years, at the earliest. He is very ambitious and also very optimistic.

What worries me is that I am pessimistic and I can't escape the feeling that our plans are useless. My parents are divorced and I've seen so many unhappy marriages that I seem unable to visualize a couple getting married and not tiring of each other. Yet again, I sometimes think I should be able to take profit from the mistakes I have seen, and thus make my own marriage a success.

Recently, this boy went away for two weeks' vacation. I've never spent a longer two weeks, and not because I'm accustomed to going out a lot, either, because mother rather held me back, socially, and I had no dates during my high school years. I think my social life has been rather neglected. But about this boy—I don't know whether I'm in love with him or not.

If he should break with me, I think I'd rather die than live; yet when I am with him I seem to have no emotions whatever. I like him to kiss me, yet when he wants to (and he is very affectionate), I want to evade him. Not for any reason except that it seems so useless. As he hasn't a job, I don't feel right about asking him to take me places, although he always urges me to say where we shall go. I know he would gladly go wherever I suggest, but I also know his financial limitations.

Usually, we just talk, which I suppose is just what we shouldn't do; at least not so much. My mother makes a scene every time we go out, because she thinks we park. But we have too much common sense to invite trouble. Outside of a kiss or two, we just talk. But my mother's suspicions so press on my mind that I can't be at ease.

I feel that my home life hasn't been normal and perhaps that is why I can't see my way clearly, as a normal person might. I am not worried about what I might do if I knew my true feelings; what worries me is that I don't know what my true feelings are. Naturally, a boy who loves a girl wants her to say that she loves him, too. And I have said so, to this boy, but I am not very good at showing my feelings.

I can't cry, no matter how much I would like to. But instead of being happy when he says he loves me, I want to cry. All I can do is be silent and hope and pray he will understand I appreciate his love. He is a very understanding person; but I know we can't go on this way, because it's too much to ask of a boy. What is wrong with me? And what should I do about it? Please help me. I need help so much.

CONFUSED.

A Case of Loneliness Befuddling the Emotions

DEAR CONFUSED: It seems plain to me that you are not in love with the boy—but only, as you say, prayerfully and tearfully grateful that he should consider you the most important person in the world, and that he should want to take care of you for life. Such devotion makes a tremendous appeal to you—for the reason that it symbolizes the emotional and social security you seemed to lose (in large part) when your parents were divorced.

Since that unfortunate turn of events, no doubt you have always been more or less hungry for hearty, casual affection (such as happy parents unconsciously give their children); and disturbed by all sorts of indefinable anxieties that were but a reflection of your mother's worried outlook and performance.

Compilers of statistics in the field of human relationships tell us that children of so-called "broken homes" make a higher percentage of ill-advised marriages in their turn, than do children reared in happy, stable homes. The reasons are several, all interlocking.

In order to escape the wretchedness which their family background represents, they tend to marry earlier than do youngsters who enjoy life with their parents. Driven by half-sensed love hunger and fear-of-life, they snatch at the first plausible promise of special care and devotion that comes their way, without questioning its worth or suitability to themselves. Also, because of their parents' shortcomings, they aren't schooled to what we might call a "high expectancy" of character and accomplishment in individuals, and thus accept second-best or worse as a matter of course.

Furthermore, their deprived and disorganized domestic background places them at a chronic social disadvantage, in the matter of meeting and cultivating the acquaintanceship — on common ground—of the best type of young citizen, by which I mean those who are mentally and spiritually sound, as a result of continuous, excellent care since infancy.

The poorly circumstanced youngster's chances of happy self-development may be further shriveled, as in your case, by a neurotic parent's repressive dictates and dour warnings concerning the supposedly sinister aspects of life and humankind—so that he grows up cynical, defiant and reckless, on the one hand; or benumbed and hopeless and melancholy, on the other hand.

As I see your problem, such factors as these account for your confusion-of-mind about your "true feeling" for your first real beau. You say you "like him to kiss you,"—BUT when he wants to kiss you, you want to evade. In other words, you crave more warm and tender affection than your family life has provided, but this boy's kisses aren't the answer to your need.

You say, "If he should break with me, I think I'd rather die than live; yet when I am with him, I seem to have no emotions whatever." In other words, he is (as I said before) the symbol and not the substance of soul-sufficing companionship. More than that, he is, I daresay, your principal and perhaps only dependable connecting link with contemporary-age society—so that you are aghast to think how lonely and isolated you would be without him to take you out. But you aren't in love with him—hence your feeling of unreality about those marriage plans you sometimes discuss. If you should marry him, no doubt the same feeling of unreality—of being lost in a mystifying and melancholy dream—would carry over into that experience.

What to do about your social and emotional plight? Well, "live" yourself out of it. Stop mooning; stop using the boy as "end-man" in a serial conversational catharsis. Employ your friendship with him as a bridge or stepping stone into a larger world, a better rounded social life that challenges your imagination and taxes your physical energies.

Instead of spending most of your time with him in driving, parking and talking, bring your muscles and your social ingenuity more into play. Go bicycling or roller skating or boating, or engineer a dancing class, composed of mutual friends, to master the newest steps, or go bowling, or try your skill at badminton; or, of afternoons, try tennis or golf. Stop talking about "love," and about a nebulous future, in which you may marry, and cram today full of merry adventure and muscle-building exercise that is more conducive to laughter than to morbid speculation. M. H.

Ten Days' Work Can Change Ugly Duckling Into Swan

By Ida Jean Kain

The difference that can be made in your looks in ten days is almost beyond belief. You can snap up your posture, slim an inch off the waist, another off the hips and get rid of pounds. That may be all that is necessary to make you stand out from the crowd.

Bad Posture Worst.

The worst thing about the average figure is bad posture. The hips trail slightly in back and, consequently, there is a compensatory outcurve of the abdomen—not to mention a sway back! The correction is to acquire the habit of pulling up with the lower abdominal muscles and tucking the hips under.

You can get the feel of "abdominal muscles up, hips under," in this simple exercise:

Lie on the back on the floor, knees flexed, feet on floor. Now dig the small of the back into the floor—the pelvis moves slightly forward, rolling the hips down and under and exercising an upward pull on the abdominal muscles. Repeat ten times. Try to carry through with this exercise by always pulling up with the lower abdominal muscles and rolling the hips under.

Lose 5 Pounds in a Breeze

If the muscles of the abdomen are very flabby, you will need additional contracting exercises to firm the muscular girdle. You may also need twisting exercises to slim the waist and rolling to smooth the hips.

As far as diet goes, losing 5 pounds is a breeze. Practically all it takes is cutting out the extras. If you are in the habit of taking two pats of butter at a meal, cut down to one, and take only one slice of bread instead of two. Limit the mayonnaise and gravies, but eat more vegetables and salads. Substitute fresh fruits for the rich desserts and skip all the between-meal calories. With only 5 pounds to go, that constitutes a slimming program.

You will be so pleased with what you can do in ten days that if the job isn't perfect, you will be eager to keep on until it is.

Those of you who have a bigger weight problem to solve can start your slimming next week with the fall figure program.

Coffee Cake Highlights Sunday Brunch

SUNDAY in many homes means but two meals—a glorified breakfast served around the noon hour, and then a real Sunday dinner. Last Sunday I was a guest at a brunch that appealed to me greatly in both flavor combinations and color harmony.

Chilled honey dew melon with blackberries started the meal. Then came cream chipped beef, scrambled eggs with tomatoes, piping hot coffee cake and coffee. The coffee cake was the quick variety made with baking powder. Following is a recipe for making it.

Quick Coffee Cake

Sift 4 tablespoons sugar. Beat until soft and creamy 3 tablespoons butter. Add the sugar to it gradually. Blend these ingredients until they are light and creamy. Beat in 1 egg and ½ cup milk. Sift before measuring, 1½ cups bread flour. Resift the flour with ¼ teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Add the sifted ingredients to the butter mixture. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Beat batter until smooth. Spread the dough in a shallow greased 8x10-inch pan. Sprinkle the top with sugar, cinnamon and ½ cup chopped nut meats. Bake the cake in a moderate over, 375 degrees, for about 25 minutes.

A good crumb topping may also be made for topping the coffee cake. Spread the top of batter with 1½ tablespoons melted butter and then combine ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon flour and sift over the cake.

Laws Urges Courts To Be 'Kindly'

Adamant Judges Deplored in Talk Before Clerks' Group

Judges, clerks and court attaches of the Federal courts "have to realize it is the drama of the citizens and not the drama of their own careers being unfolded within the walls of the courts," Associate Justice Bolitha J. Laws of United States District Court last night told nearly 150 persons at a dinner of the Federal Court Clerks Association at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Citizens have indicated they are dissatisfied with conditions in the courts by submitting their problems to arbitration by laymen," he declared. "Some judges, marshals and clerks have adopted stern and forbidding attitudes which do not promote the respect of citizens, although they nevertheless must obey the courts."

Urging a more sympathetic attitude on the part of the courts toward persons who bring their problems and differences to the tribunals, Justice Laws said "a two-fisted attitude is wrong. . . . The teacher, the newspaperman, the physician can all teach the judge something."

In addition to "patient, kindly understanding," there must be efficiency in the courts, Justice Laws said. Stating that "the advance of society is predicated by efficiency," he said, "Perhaps the turning to sources other than the courts for arbitration on the part of laymen has been caused by a lack of efficiency in high tribunals."

In the past five years the courts have been increasingly aware of this disregard "as dangerous to the courts as to the citizens," Justice Laws said. He cited directors of the courts and judicial conferences—"discussions translated into actions"—as "forward steps" on the part of the tribunals.

Clerks he urged to treat their work as a profession—"and make a romance and adventure out of your profession."

Col. Charles E. Stewart, clerk of the District Court, was toastmaster. Presiding officer was George Brodbeck, clerk of the District Court of Philadelphia.

Henry P. Chandler, director of the administrative office of the United States Court, complimented the group on their cooperation in "bringing about justice throughout the country."

Sessions of the nineteenth annual gathering of the group were held yesterday at the Wardman Park.

Suspect Finds Police Wiser Than Fiction

Gives Up to Prove Innocence, Is Held In Forest Glen Theft

Charles G. Kelly, 21, of Forest Glen, Md., knows now that detective stories just can't be depended on.

He walked into Montgomery County police headquarters in Silver Spring, Md., Thursday night remarking that he had heard "they" were looking for him.

"They" were. But they hadn't said so to anyone. Officer Frank Lane became suspicious and pressed for further information.

"Why, if I did anything," the suspect protested, "you don't think I'd walk into a police station, do you?"

"That's just exactly what you would do," retorted Officer Lane.

And so yesterday morning Charles Kelly confessed to the robbery of $32.50 from the Forest Glen Ice Cream Mart on Wednesday night, police said.

Charged with grand larceny and burglary, Kelly is being held in the Rockville Jail, with the preliminary hearing set for September 9.

A resident of Country Club Hills, he opposed William C. Ayers for the Republican nomination, winning by a nine-to-eight majority in the executive committee voting.

D. C. Guarding Vital Buildings From Sabotage

Precautions Taken At Weather Bureau And Water Plants

Federal and District government agencies have speeded up their programs of precautionary measures against sabotage to vital buildings and water plants in the city.

Signs warning persons without credentials to keep clear of certain property have been posted at the Bureau of Standards, Weather Bureau, the various municipal reservoirs and filter plants and at the new fire alarm headquarters in McMillan Park.

Extra guards have been placed on duty at these key spots, each of which is vital to the Army, as well as important to the general welfare of the local and nearby communities.

The War Department, through the United States Engineer Corps, has asked the District Commissioners to include a sum of $65,000 in next year's budget to build protective fences around the Dalecarlia and McMillan water plants and several other important filter and pumping stations.

Herbert A. Friede, superintendent of the fire alarm system, yesterday said floodlights had been placed on top the new building. The grounds around the fire alarm headquarters are being guarded 24 hours a day.

Meanwhile, public utilities in the city have been strengthening their own guard systems in cooperation with War Department advisers. Practically all the local power plants have been ringed by fences.

Capital News In Brief

Thieves Take Safe, Liquor in Forays

Burglars literally made two big "hauls" early yesterday, removing a safe from a filling station and 16 cases of liquor from a whisky store.

The safe robbery occurred at a service station at 1701 Benning road northeast, according to James W. Carrick, of 704 Seventh street northeast, manager of the station. He discovered the safe missing when he opened yesterday. The safe contained $164, he said.

Locks were broken from the front door of a liquor store at 6037 Dix street northeast, and $309 worth of bottled whisky stolen.

District Listed High in U. S. Tax Payments

Washingtonians Paid More Than Residents Of Any of 22 States

District taxpayers paid $28,548,100.84 to the United States Government in the last fiscal year—more than was paid by any of 22 States and four territories—the Treasury Department revealed yesterday. The fiscal year ended June 30, 1940.

Crediting the District with a population of 627,000, before the 1940 census figures were available, it was disclosed Washingtonians paid 0.26 per cent of the income taxes, 0.53 per cent of all internal revenue payments, 0.17 per cent of miscellaneous and 1 per cent of pay-roll taxes. The credited population of 627,000 was 0.48 per cent of the country's total population.

The total amount received from the Nation this year, $5,340,452,348, was an increase over the 1939 amount when $5,181,573,952 was collected.

A decrease of 0.6 per cent in the District's corporation income taxes was marked, while personal income taxes dropped 7.6 per cent. Pay-roll or employment taxes, including carrier taxes, showed an increase of 12.8 per cent in the District. The greatest falling off was in miscellaneous revenue, including excess-profits taxes, which descended 28.9 in the year.

D. C. Given Hope of Fair Labor Day

Picnics and Hikes Planned Locally; Showers Forecast For Today

Forecasting showers and moderately warm for today, the Weather Bureau last night held out hope of "generally fair and cooler" weather Monday for thousands of Labor Day week-enders in this area.

Tomorrow will probably also see showers and moderately warm weather before skies clear, according to the long-range five-day forecast. Meanwhile, tropical disturbances were reported heading north from off the Florida coast, and small craft were warned to stay inshore on the Carolina Capes.

Government pay day today was expected to aid hundreds of employes in their exodus from Washington. At the same time hotels and transportation companies anticipated large numbers of tourists coming to the Capital over the week-end.

The Keystone Automobile Club warned yesterday that haste is a primary cause in the large number of traffic accidents which pile up each Labor Day week-end. An official said that the "earlier the start" on a Labor Day holiday "the more opportunity for arriving safely."

The Washington Industrial Union Council will hold a Labor Day picnic at Club Del Rio on the South River near Annapolis, Md. Special buses will leave Fifteenth and H streets northwest at 10 a. m. Monday.

An amplifying system will carry the Nation-wide radio broadcast of C. I. O. President John L. Lewis' Labor Day address to all parts of the picnic grounds.

Members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club will leave the National Theater at 10 a. m. Monday for Chapel Point, Md., where there will be swimming and hiking in the vicinity. The club will conduct a hike from Potomac, Md., to Great Falls tomorrow, leaving the National Theater at 9 a. m.

The Public Library, with all its branches and sub-branches, will be closed all day Monday, Miss Clara W. Herbert, acting librarian, announced.

E. R. Greer Retires After 43 Years In D. C. Service

The Commissioners yesterday honored 70-year-old Edward R. Greer, who retires today from the municipal government after 43 years of service.

Son of Rear Admiral James A. Greer, a superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, Greer entered the District Government in 1897 as a chainman and was transferred to the record office of the engineering department in 1907.

He was educated at Emerson Institute here and left in 1890 to serve in an engineering capacity on the Nicaragua Canal project. A member of the old Columbia Tennis Club, Greer was an excellent tennis player in his younger days. He also played baseball. Asked yesterday what he intends to do now, he replied: "Sleep."

The Commissioners sent a letter of praise which was read before his colleagues at a party in the office of the chief clerk of the department.

2 New Maryland Toll Bridges May Become Free in 12 Years

Havre de Grace, Md., Aug. 30.—Traffic—in greater numbers than expected—is rolling steadily across the Susquehanna River bridge, one of two new Maryland spans costing $3,000,000 each.

In the first eight hours, 3,100 cars crossed the bridge, dedicated Wednesday. The number is part of the basis for a prediction by Ezra B. Whitman, State roads commission chairman, that the two bridges may pay for themselves in 12 to 15 years, or sooner than anticipated.

Bonds worth $6,000,000 were issued to cover part of the cost of the Susquehanna Bridge, and the Potomac River Bridge at Morgantown.

Tolls here are 20 cents per car, 25 cents to $1.45 for trucks. Road officials said they expected 2,334,000 machines to use the bridge the first year, for a gross revenue of $423,000.

In Baltimore, Whitman said the Potomac Bridge was expected to yield $133,000 the first year through 128,000 vehicles, charged at 75 cents per car and a higher rate for trucks.

Curran Studying Sources Of Green Guards' Income

Inquiry Expected to Take a Week; Woman's Defense Corps Abandons Court-Martial for Dissident Member

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran's investigation of the Green Guards of America, Inc., self-styled women's "home defense" organization, will continue for at least another week, he announced last night.

Curran devoted several hours to questioning members of the group yesterday, and said that an audit of all accounts and records confiscated earlier will be made by a Government agent.

"I am determined to learn all the facts behind the group's every financial transaction," Curran said. "I want to know the purposes of the organization, the promises made to prospective members, and wether those promises were kept."

He said he had been looking into the purchase of uniforms for enrolled members.

"As I understand it," he declared, "the members paid $5 upon joining and took a receipt for that amount to a store where, upon payment of $4.50 additional, they were given a uniform. I am particularly interested in this transaction."

Mrs. Oleta DeMar, 1508 Fourteenth street northwest, who said she was recently appointed to keep the organization's accounts, spent some time with Curran yesterday explaining the records.

An interorganization squabble brought the Green Guards to Curran's attention. Mrs. Frank A. Werner, one-time president of the local branch, resigned following a tiff with Mrs. Virginia Nowell, founder and national president. Mrs. Werner charged the group with "profiteering on patriotism."

Court-martial proceedings against Mrs. Werner were dropped last night after some 30 members of the organization met at the home of Mrs. Nowell, 1747 Church street northwest. The trial, Mrs. Nowell explained, was decided at the last moment to be unnecessary since Mrs. Werner had been "discharged" by the New York office.

The election will be held soon, said Miss Abbie M. Kerr, local vice president and temporary head. "We hope," she said, "in time to gain recognition as a woman's National Guard, which is what we actually are. We are preparing for what may never come, but if it comes we will be ready."

Baptists Move World Office Here

Invasion Threat Forces Alliance To Quit London Headquarters

don, the headquarters of the Baptist World Alliance, is being given sanctuary in Washington.

Threats of invasion and communication and transportation difficulties prompted the temporary change, according to Dr. W. O. Lewis, Alliance general secretary, who on Monday will occupy space in the headquarters building of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, 715 Eighth street northwest.

American-born Dr. Lewis, who returned from Paris in February, 1939, after 17 years with the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, for several weeks has been sharing offices of the Rev. Edwin Fuller, assistant pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest.

Although decision to move came at the Northern Baptist Convention in Atlantic City last May, when Dr. Lewis was named to his present post, the Alliance deemed it advisable to withhold formal announcement of such plans for several months, it was explained.

Dr. James Henry Rushbrooke, Alliance president, who attended that parley, is maintaining a skeleton office in London. There is a possibility, said Dr. Lewis, that a former stenographer there, and a refugee from Vienna, may come to assist at the temporary headquarters here.

Dr. Lewis, who described the Alliance as a "loose federation of Baptist bodies of the world for fellowship," and not a missionary or administrative group, pictured a sorry state for Baptist work in Europe, where he has served in almost every country.

Practically all Baptist preachers in eastern Poland have been exiled, and churches, orphanages and homes for the aged either bombed or closed, he said, emphasizing that lack of clergymen was bringing many laymen into preaching service.

Dream Comes True

A dream of many years will be realized tomorrow at 9 a. m. when the congregation of Resurrection Chapel begins services in its new $12,000 building at Fifteenth and G streets northeast.

The structure, replacing a frame chapel used for many years, has been made possible through the efforts of the Rev. Enoch M. Thompson, rector of Nativity Episcopal Parish, of which the chapel is a mission; the vestry, and the members.

Oil Wells Provide Background For Vivid Romance in 'Boom Town'

Stellar Cast Gives Robust Touch to Palace Action-Drama; Varied Short-Reels

"BOOM TOWN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by James Edward Grant, adapted to the screen by John Lee Mahin, costarring Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr with Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwell, Chill Wills, Marian Martin, Minna Gombell, Joe Yule, Horace Murphy, Roy Gordon, Richard Lane, George Lessey, Sara Haden, Frank Orth, Frank McGlynn, sr., and Curt Bois. Directed by Jack Conway. At Loew's Palace Theater.

On the evidence of the current cinema week, it seems that derricks, oil gushers, blazing storage tanks and the other incidentals of spouting fluid wealth out of the ground, in themselves, are not the chief reliance of drama. These flamboyant factors make picturesque background, but the real drama—which perforce becomes melodrama—lies in the human relationships of the characters the scenarist is able to dig up on the drilling fields, along with his tappings of great reservoirs of riches.

BELL

This was demonstrated yesterday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, where "Boom Town" inaugurated the new season of feature releases stressed for their intimate "human appeal" and power to distract the public mind from the war.

There is, as a matter of fact, a full measure of "war" in "Boom Town." It is a purely personal war, however, that thinly disguises the picture's true nature as a "triangle love story," concerned with the thrilling lives of the "wildcatters." If one were to go in search of analogies, he could find them in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's earlier productions of "San Francisco" and "Test Pilot." These are comparisons which, of course, are suggested by the casting of the stellar roles. Once again we have Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy battling it out for financial and romantic supremacy. The women in the case are Claudette Colbert—cast opposite Gable in the memorable "It Happened One Night—and Hedy Lamarr.

"Boom Town" is particularly eloquent in its exposition of the argument that all oil field workers are up one day and down the next. Millions flow through the toughened hands of the Messrs. Gable and Tracy while they are trying to work out their personal destinies. One or the other always happens to be broke at the identical moment when his pseudo-pal is "on top." The thing see-saws thus for many reels. The one most vitally concerned is Miss Colbert, who has married her ostensible fiance's best friend. That would be Mr. Gable. His best friend—with occasional modifications—would be Mr. Tracy. They thrash it out to a final agreement that brings the whole turbulent business out right side up, as one suspects will happen from the beginning.

The roles in which they appear may seem a bit stenciled, but there can be no quibbling about the skill with which the pivotal characters are portrayed by Gable, Tracy, Colbert, Lamarr and Frank Morgan. Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy, out of M-G-M's first flight of actors, battle the issue out, much as they did in "San Francisco," although Mr. Tracy in the present item is not garbed in the habiliments of the clergy. Their celluloid tilts inevitably are epochal. Miss Colbert, as the romantic fountainhead of the play's basic love interest, does her usual competent job of being the tortured wife. Hedy Lamarr, in the rather obvious role of "the other woman," has least of all to do—she is a spy for Mr. Gable when he crashes New York as a mastodon of "big business"—but does her little with rather more than casual effectiveness. Frank Morgan is a slightly demented oil-field promoter, who manages to get himself involved in all the drama's major catastrophes. Foremost in the supporting cast are Lionel Atwill, whose capabilities are put under no great strain; Chill Wills, who does an exceptionally deft trick of impersonating a hybrid character halfway between camp cook and sheriff; Minna Gombell and Marian Martin, who have something to do with the glamour of most of the dance hall scenes.

The short subjects on the new bill at the Palace are held within reasonable bounds by the length of the major feature. Pete Smith tantalizes a quiz-conscious public by popping off the third list of questions that comprise the basis of his "Please Answer" series. The natural-color cartoon comedy, "Romeo in Rhythm," struck this observer as being just a shade pointless, but the "News of the Day" snapped into the groove with a well-selected list of current events, picturized with an eye to comedy as well as factual accuracy.

But it is "Boom Town" that will be booming along for weeks at Thirteenth and F regardless of what is mixed with it. It possesses a superabundance of what it takes to make the average picturegoer satisfied with his generation.

American Scenes

James A. FitzPatrick will concentrate on the United States for his new series of Technicolor Travel-talks for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The first will be "Washington, D. C., the Capital City," followed by "Cavalcade of San Francisco."

A Secret Agent of Big Business

among the principals in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Boom Town," which yesterday inaugurated the new Loew season of 1940-41, at the Palace Theater. Miss Lamarr, in this subject, is one of a stellar cast that includes Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Frank Morgan. Her allurements remain undimmed

Shirley Temple Still Draws Faithful Fans to the Capitol

By Richard L. Coe

"YOUNG PEOPLE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Edward Blum and Don Ettlinger, starring Shirley Temple, with Jack Oakie, Charlotte Greenwood, Arleen Whelan, George Montgomery, Kathleen Howard, Minor Watson, Frank Swann, Mae Marsh, Sara Edwards, Irving Bacon, Charles Halton, Arthur Aylesworth, Olin Howland, Billy Wayne, Harry Tyler and Darryl Hickman. Music and lyrics by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren. Directed by Alan Dawn. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Anyone who thought Shirley Temple's twenty-second and final picture for Twentieth Century-Fox was the last gasp of a dying swan should have seen the crowd which greeted the first showing of "Young People" yesterday morning at the Capitol.

That so large a public has remained faithful to the greatest child star of them all despite some of the worst scripts ever foisted on a resourceful player is a heartening indication that this "last" contract film is but a prelude to better—and fewer—vehicles. Happily "Young People" is a musical, her first in two years, for it is in song and dance that one finds her most enchanting.

In "Young People" Shirley is called upon to deliver New England to the New Deal. Although she saved the Empire in Queen Victoria's glorious days, the job is pretty tough with no help whatever from a script department which obviously pulled the lines out of an old box. Charlotte Greenwood and Jack Oakie play two song-and-dance vaudevillians who are left the baby daughter of former stage pals.

The baby, of course, is Shirley, and clippings from several of her old films enable her to grow up all over again. We see her doing that Hawaiian number which first brought her notice and finally the memorable "Baby Take a Bow" she did with Warner Baxter in "Stand Up and Cheer." Trick camera work make these excerpts seem part of the current story, and its happiest.

All of which would be far more amusing were the lines less obvious. Ultimately the film bogs down into a wholehearted conversion of the stony-faced ones to the life of sweetness and light, a finale which continues to the bitter end one of the characteristics that have made Shirley Temple film anathama to those who despise cloying sentimentality. Let's hope there's a wise film mentor somewhere on Shirley's career horizon soon.

Oakie muggs pretty heavily in an effort to be amusing as the song-and-dance man, but the script ruined him too early in the game. It's good to see Charlotte Greenwood back again, even if she too is bogged down by banalities. They're a good partnership, though. Arleen Whelan and Kathleen Howard are in evidence and there's a new face in George Montgomery as a likable newshawk.

Personalities also dominate the Capitol stage revue, with Phil Regan in the flesh and President Roosevelt serving as a loudly cheered backdrop for a new, promising patriotic song, "Democracy's Awake."

The Irish tenor caught the crowd as usual with his genial nature, gentle singing. Although he seemed a trifle tired yesterday afternoon, he was sport enough for some unscheduled tumbling with comics Christy and Gould. Besides a group of current ballads and two of the songs of Erin he's noted for, Regan introduces a song by Gene Ford and Sparty Donato, "Democracy's Awake," ambitiously staged with the Rhythm Rockets.

Betty Jane Cooper, who stole one of Mr. White's recent "Scandals," offers several tap routines, best of which is her unannounced opener, a Hawaiian hula with some nifty and all too frequently lacking wrist work. Sandy Grant, captain of the Capitol's Rockets, makes her bow as a solo dancer in a ballet from Debussy's "Claire de Lune."

Leon LaFell's Harmonica Foursome and Christy and Gould, a knockabout duo, complete the variety performers.

The New Yorker

Jacqueline Cochran, famous aviatrix, is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons.

I CAN'T RESIST the opportunity of dealing with a point which has long been on my mind in connection with women in aviation and the prominent part they might play in our accelerated national defense arrangements.

During the Finnish-Russian war, I read about Russian women pilots fighting over the Finnish lines in pursuit and other military type planes. But it did not impress me. I don't think women have a place in active combat duty any more than I think they are emotionally or physically suited to steady work at the controls of commercial transport planes. I don't think women should take men's places in men's jobs.

Miss Cochran

BEFORE THE WAR started I had a talk with Hannah Reitsch, German aviatrix who was a captain in the German air corps. She told me of the great number of pilots she had trained. That impressed me greatly. For in teaching others the fundamentals of flying, navigation and radio work, women can be of immense help. About 2 per cent of our licensed pilots in the United States are women.

IF THE PURPOSE of the student pilots training program now being fostered by the Government is to teach our youth how to fly for the pleasure of it and the incidental advantages, then women should have the same opportunity as the men. If the program is designed to further our national defense, then again women should receive more recognition, in my opinion, than they are receiving.

THIS IS NOT a criticism of the civil aeronautics board of the Department of Commerce, under whose direction the program is being carried out. This authority is to be commended for what it has accomplished. But the program doesn't go far enough. After considerable female agitation the student pilot program was opened to girls—one girl being admitted to nine men. But many of the training places are not open to women at all, such, for example, as the men's schools.

I BELIEVE a Federal program of training for women should start with at least a thousand candidates, all of them taking substantially the same training as that given in an air corps. Women have proven frequently their capability to absorb advanced instruction and to handle almost every type of plane. Aside from one of the fastest types of private craft which I use to get myself about the country on my cosmetics business, I have flown alone for many thousands of miles in the speedy pursuit ship designated for the Army by Maj. Alexander Seversky. Amelia Earhart and other women have lifted heavy loads in big, fast craft for long distance flights. Horsepower and speed to not bother women any more than men.

OUT OF AN ORGANIZED women's air corps there can be developed instructors, ambulance pilots, air couriers and pilots for many other branches of back-line duty, including carrying of supplies. They will be just as good as men in their efforts if given like training and a similar process of elimination, and they will release just a like number of men for more active and important service.

THERE ARE NOW about 1,300 licensed women pilots. Unfortunately only about 115 of these have yet passed into a higher license ranking than the private licenses or the student license. But out of this group could be formed the nucleus of a well-trained, highly-skilled women's auxiliary corps. Those devoting their time to the work should receive besides their training sufficient pay to defray their actual cost of living.

GIVE THE WOMEN this set-up and opportunity and I'll guarantee that two years from now they will start paying big dividends on the money spent. And without impinging on the men's sphere of activities.

'The Sea Hawk' Joins Earle's Select Roster of Holdovers

Public thirst for adventure undiluted is generously assuaged in "The Sea Hawk," now stepping into its second huge week at the Earle.

A prize swashbuckler of the cinema is "The Sea Hawk." Its buccaneers bid fair to storm every screen in the country, stow away unlimited gold in boxoffices.

Elizabeth's England and the men who made Britain mistress of the seas appear in a hurly-burly of hard-fought battle, diplomatic chicanery and gilded court life. The fabulous Spanish Main looms up as the background of this struggle for gold and empire. Color and movement of the picture are superb. Top thrill is the boarding of the great Spanish treasure galleon by the English privateers. So many hard knocks and nose dives are taken in this bloody scrap that the movie extras involved must have nursed bruises for many days.

A frail thread of romance between Errol Flynn and Brenda Marshall winds delicately through the more important main story of England's rise to power, the double-dealing of King Philip II of Spain and Queen Elizabeth. The Spanish king caught himself a tartar in Elizabeth who could both out-lie and out-fight him. Highly amusing are the court scenes, both Spanish and English. King Philip plans contemptuously and confidently to brand a double-cross on England. Elizabeth meets his ambassador with soft words, apologies for the actions of her privateers and a generally elegant runaround. But privately she honors the privateers, encourages them to bigger and better pillaging so that England may be made strong.

Flynn's Role a "Natural"

Flora Robson as Elizabeth, crafty, gay and relentless, takes the acting honors of the picture. Not that Errol Flynn is less than a glamorous and commanding figure as the "Sea Hawk," but the role is so much in his groove that he doesn't have to do much acting. Brenda Marshall is a pretty sugar plum as Dona Maria.

Many of Hollywood's best character actors play splendidly in subsidiary roles. Claude Rains is a sly Spanish ambassador, Una O'Connor, a pernickety little English waiting woman; Alan Hale, a forthright and rollicking pirate. Montagu Love plays King Philip with an oleaginous touch. Donald Crisp and Henry Daniell are, respectively, the honest and sturdy Sir John Burleson and treacherous Lord Walsingham. Those old stars of the silent days, Robert Warwick and Pedro de Cordoba, appear as English and Spanish captains.

Johnny Barnes, best tap dancer ever produced in Washington, heads the stage show together with the excellent Ben Yost singers. The Earle Roxyettes make a pretty picture dancing in hoop skirts, become plumb sensational in "Polka Dots and Moonbeams" when they go all round the stage balanced on giant globes. First time we ever saw a home run made by walking on a ball.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 30.

On the "Four Mothers" set at Warner's yesterday some visitors asked Bill Keighley who the director of the picture was. He pointed to Eddie Albert sitting in Bill's own director's chair, with head thrown back and neatly snoring. Said the visitors, "Oh, well, the stars do all the work anyway—we hear directors haven't much brains." Wish I could get the ear of that tourist. Without directors, lots of our stars would be starving—or back home selling ties.

The kindest thing you could do with Elsa Maxwell's "Public Deb No. 1" would be to draw over it a heavy veil of silence. It's neither flesh nor fish; it's—well, it's unfortunate that fine actors like George Murphy, Charlie Ruggles, Mischa Auer, and Ralph Bellamy can't find better material. Supposed comedy situations were left hanging in midair, and so was the audience. The dullness was relieved by Franklin Pangborn and Slapsie Maxie playing bits. Trey were wonderful. But if what Miss Maxwell does on that screen is acting, then I've given the best years of my life to the wrong profession.

Stu Erwin works easier with Baby Sandy than anyone else on the picture, "Fireman, Save My Child." The other day he was supposed to hold Sandy in his arms while watching a building burn down. Sandy's act was to holler and cheer and enjoy it to the utmost. So Stu told Sandy he was going to give her a ride on that big horse in pasture across from the sound stage—talked about the horse for five minutes—got Sandy all excited. He was signalled to rush on the set—and by that time Sandy was screaming so loud you couldn't hear the author's lines.

On the set for "Seven Sinners" Director Tay Garnett says "I'm the glamour boy assisted by Dietrich" . . . who's so happy now she's wearing sailor pants.

Those two young "Mexicans" who were sent to Director Arthur Lubin to audition for roles in "Meet the Wildcat" did a little wrestling with the dialect—then smiled sheepishly—told Arthur they were just a couple of Brooklyn boys trying to get along.

Jack Carson was getting a little hot under the collar on the "Fireman, Save My Child" set the other day. He was to be married to Kay St. Germain that night—and Edgar Kennedy told Jack he heard they were going to have a night call.

Anna Neagle had a strange request from an exhibitor in San Francisco who said he could put over her picture, "Queen of Destiny," if she would send him some "leg art." The picture is about Queen Victoria. Now really!

Connie Bennett's been off the screen for quite some time, but now that she's back in stride and doing "Passage West" with Pat O'Brien—she's up to her old tricks. All waf love for the first three days until soft-spoken newcomer, Director John Brahm dared to criticize Connie's gown. Now, at times, the set resembles a Mexican revolution.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 30 (DST).—Never let it be said the movies do not keep abreast of the times. Two studios have prepared stories with conscription as the topic and now that the bill has been passed, get ready for the avalanche. Both Twentieth Century and Warners are rushing through with timely screen plays that deal with the Citizens Training Camp.

PARSONS

Darryl Zanuck's contribution is "Yankee Doodle Goes to Plattsburg," an original by Delmar Daves and Robert Hopkins. It's a semimusical with Don Ameche and the very amusing Ben Carter in the cast. The Warner yarn, "You're in the Army Now," is a hilarious comedy cooked up by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay.

What grand news it is to hear that Alan Mowbray, who has been putting war work before his career these past few months, will have one of the best roles of his life in Alexander Korda's "Lady Hamilton," starring Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier. For the last eight weeks Alan has devoted every moment to putting over the Noel Coward "Tonight At 8:30" plays for the British war relief. Yesterday, however, he took time out to sign for the role of Lord Hamilton, Vivien Leigh's husband.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: One of Hollywood's unsuspected romances is that of Katie Hepburn and Garson Kanin, who have been seeing plenty of each other; the Add Randall-Mrs. Marcus Daly romance continues to attract attention; Bob Taylor, who has practically covered Barbara Stanwyck with jewelry since their marriage, just gave her an aquamarine and diamond clip—a sympathy gift because she is having a minor operation; Milton Berle called Irene Coleman long distance tonight and caught up with her at Ciro's where she had a date with Alan Gordon; the Eddie Lowes have bought the beautiful Beverly Hills home of the Oscar Hammersteins and Rita is up to her neck getting it furnished.

Now comes a fish story about Jean Arthur, whose P. A. says she caught a 20-pound salmon at Puget Sound.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Aug. 30.—Let's discuss the Yankees. They are the new threat in the American League pennant race, it seems. All of a sudden the Yankee team that was in last place in June now has the two leaders looking apprehensively over their shoulders toward the commotion the Yanks are causing in the rear.

POVICH

After several false alarms, the Yankees have lately begun to roll and only 4½ games now separate them from the league-leading Indians, only 2½ games from the second-place Tigers. Broadway Betting Commissioner Jack Doyle says the Yanks are no worse than 3-to-1 shots to take it all. The strange angle of it is that the Washington club, definitely out of the race itself, will have much to say about the final success or failure of the Yanks.

Due to a screwy sort of league schedule, one third of the Yankees' remaining 33 games of the season are with the Nats. Eleven more times this season Washington and New York will meet. Thus on their ability to beat the Nats rests in a large measure the final fate of the Yanks.

While New York is engaged in its long series with the Nats, the Indians and the Tigers will be occupied in what appears to be a throat-cutting party. They will meet each other nine times in the final month of play and it is while the two leaders are thus engaged that the Yankees expect to gain a powerful piece of ground in the race.

The Yankees' contending position at this time recalls to this department a conversation with Manager Joe McCarthy in late May when his club was floundering about in seventh place, 10½ games behind the lead. McCarthy was worried, but he didn't consider his situation hopeless. If we gain two games a month—and that isn't much—we'll be in a position to take it all in September," he said.

Well, the Yanks are in that position, but not because they were able to gain at a two-game-per-month rate. In fact, during June and most of July, they actually lost ground. But in August they gained not two but five games on the league leaders. They unleashed that rush in their darkest hour when anything less would remove them completely from the pennant picture.

Where do the Yankees go from here? It's your guess. One thing we do claim to know, if the Yankees were, indeed, the Yanks of 1936-37-38-39, there would be little speculation as to their ultimate destination. They'd make up the necessary ground without undue strain and waltz into the pennant.

JOE McCARTHY

But for all of their late-season rush, the Yankees don't strike us as the same kind of a steam-rolling outfit they used to be. This year they don't overpower the opposition. This year, gaining five games in a month—a pipe for the old Yankees—looms as a struggle. They aren't the same sound superclub they used to be. They have too many weak spots.

The Yanks have Ruffing, but he isn't the same old reliable. He's the best pitcher on the team, but his is no longer sure-fire, and they don't have Gomez who could always team with Ruffing in any three-game series and be pretty sure to land at least two games for the Yanks. In those days, if you were meeting the Yanks, and anybody besides Ruffing and Gomez beat you, the Yanks usually had a sweep of a three-game series.

JOE DiMAGGIO

If the Yanks do maintain their same hot pace of August and win the pennant then they'll owe it chiefly to three guys—Joe DiMaggio, Joe Gordon and Tom Henrich. They are the fellows who have seized the flickering torch of the Yankee title and fanned it to full flame. DiMaggio has been sizzling with the bat, and Henrich is playing the best ball of his career with the Yanks. Joe McCarthy's maneuver with Joe Gordon putting him at the top of the batting order, has magically roused Gordon from his batting slump.

"LEFTY" GOMEZ

At this writing it seems that those three will have to slug the Yanks into the pennant. Charley Keller is still in the throes of his mysterious batting slump, and Frankie Crozetti's bat is a horrible handicap. Red Rolfe is simply having a dismal year both at bat and field, and Babe Dahlgren's value is chiefly defensive.

The Yankees have not only the Indians to catch. Out in front of them also are the Tigers, and any sort of a modest winning streak may carry either club so far in front of the Yankees that even the hottest Yankee pace won't be sufficient. Unless the Tigers and Indians come close to splitting their nine remaining games against each other, the task of the Yankees will be that much more difficult.

"RED" RUFFING

McSpaden, Nelson and Guldahl Win

Slammin' Sam, Down 3 Holes After 27, Puts On Hot Finish; Semifinals Set Today

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 30.—Most of the color and the commotion went out of the P. G. A. championship today when Gene Sarazen was beaten by Sam Snead on the thirty-sixth green in a heartbreaker, but four powerful young golfers survived to battle in the semifinals tomorrow.

Besides Snead, those remaining in the match play classic were Ralph Guldahl, National Open champion in 1937 and 1938; Byron Nelson, Open king in 1939, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, who recently lost his Canadian Open title to Snead in a play-off. Four solid fairway citizens, but short one zing as a group.

Nelson Beats Kirk

Guldahl, who is reputed to be only so-so as a match player, didn't display any glaring weakness as he trimmed Ben Hogan, year's biggest money winner, 3 and 2. The husky, stoop-shouldered star shot a 69 at Hogan in their morning round and was eight under par when he closed him out on the thirty-fourth green.

Nelson, who meets Guldahl tomorrow, scored an easy 6 and 5 victory over Eddie Kirk, of Farmington, Mich., the only dark horse to reach the quarter-finals. Improving as the tournament progresses, the quiet Texan stroked a 70 to lead Kirk four holes at the end of the morning round and then loafed along at par to choke his man off in the afternoon.

McSpaden, who had a terrible time beating Walt Hagen in his previous match, gave little Paul Runyan the day's worst shellacking, 8 and 6. Nobody could remember having seen Runyan, a twice former winner, absorb such a beating. He was four over par and floundering when the end came.

All the day's drama was concentrated in the tight duel between Snead and Sarazen, which saw the popular little squire come apart like a dollar pair of pants in a final, tragic nine-hole stretch. A big part of the gallery scraped the mud from its shoes and went on home after he bowed out.

Sarazen Fires 68

Sarazen, trying to win once more a trophy he first captured in 1922, shot a great 68 in the morning to take a 2-up lead over the tall mountaineer who is one of the world's longest drivers. He shot a steady par 36 on the first nine in the afternoon to stand 3 up at the twenty-seventh hole, and it looked like it was in the bag. Three up with nine to go and he was hitting his woods and irons straight and true.

There was no hint of the impending disaster when Snead holed a good putt for a birdie on the twenty-ninth to cut his deficit to two holes.

Nat-Yank Series Held Crucial in A. L. Race

Rained Out Yesterday, Clubs Meet in Single Game Today, Double-Header Tomorrow While Indians, Tigers Tremble at Champs' Surge

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 30.—For their next three games, at least, the Nats will be part of the American League pennant picture in an accidental sort of way. The schedule, over which they have no control, pits the Nats against the Yankees tomorrow in a single game and Sunday in a double-header.

The league-leading Cleveland Indians and the second-place Tigers will be eyeing the results of the Nats-Yankee series with selfish interest. They will be grateful for any little obstacle the Nats can contribute to the late-season rush of the Yanks, who are breathing hot on the necks of the two leaders.

The Indians and Tigers have no reason to expect too much from the Nats, however. Beating the Yankees this season is a task the Nats haven't done with any great regularity. In fact, they've won only two of the ten games played with the New York club. Nevertheless, the Nats are an important figure in the league race over the week-end.

Game Postponed

A day-long drizzzle caused the Yankees' bosses to postpone the scheduled game with the Nats today, but they declined to create a double-header for tomorrow, choosing instead to play the game off later in the season. The Yanks are serious about taking it all with their late rush, and Manager Joe McCarthy didn't consider his pitching staff up to two consecutive double-headers.

For tomorrow's game, Manager Bucky Harris is restoring Joe Krakauskas to a starting role. He may not be doing the bow-legged left-hander any favor in Krakky's attempt to score his first victory of the season. The Yanks have won something like 16 of their last 19 starts and are the hot club of the league. They've beaten Dutch Leonard three times this year and Ken Chase four.

Krakky vs. Donald.

It will be Krakauskas vs. Atley Donald, who has come along to lend a potent hand to the Yankees' August surge.

Joe DiMaggio may not figure in the series here. The big Italian slugger is still suffering from a leg injury and with the Yankee Stadium outfield still slippery, McCarthy may not care to risk his ace in an early return to the game.

The Yankees' sensational bid to get back into the pennant race has gripped New York in a new wave of baseball interest. Crowds of 50,000 and 70,000 have turned out at Yankee Stadium during the past week, and Sunday's double-header is expected to lure another throng of 50,000.

Tomorrow, after a week's absence, Gerald Walker will be in the Nats' outfield. During his convalescence from a muscle injury to his thigh the Nats have been a comparatively punchless crew and have failed to win despite tolerable pitching.

Manager Harris was tempted to start Dutch Leonard today, but he will reserve Leonard for duty in Sunday's twin bill. Walter Masterson or Rene Monteagudo may start the second game on Sunday, although Harris may make a last-minute change and start Sid Hudson, who was knocked out of the box after only two innings of work by the Tigers on Thursday.

Reds Waste Slugging and Lose, 6 to 2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 30.—The Brooklyn Dodgers crumbled the Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 2, today in a farewell gesture to the West, cutting the National League champions' lead to 7½ games before heading for home.

It was a strange ball game that the two teams served up to 10,652 spectators.

The usually light-hitting Reds collected ten safeties, including Frank McCormick's eighteenth home run and six doubles off Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin, yet were held practically helpless. McCormick's homer came in the first inning and the only other time the Reds were able to score was in the sixth when Ernie Lombardi and Jim Ripple hit successive doubles.

Feller Gains 23d Victory, Beats Chisox

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Bobby Feller, pitching air-tight ball in the pinches, racked up his twenty-third victory tonight as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 2, before 44,877 spectators.

Beaten his last time out, Feller was hit freely tonight, but was almost untouchable with men on bases. He left 11 runners stranded and struck out ten batters.

The Indians sewed up the game in the first inning. Southpaw Thornton Lee retired the first two batters easily, then Lou Boudreau singled and Hal Trosky walked. Jeff Heath followed with a long wallop into the rightfield stands.

The victory was Cleveland's second in six games and stretched their first place lead to two and a half games over Detroit and five games ahead of the third-place Yankees.

The Indians added their fourth run in the sixth when Heath opened with a single, was sacrificed to second by Ken Keltner, advanced to third on Ray Mack's single and scored on Rollie Hemsley's outfield fly.

Julius Solters accounted for the first Sox run in the fourth with his tenth home run of the season. The second run came on successive singles by Taft Wright, Mike Tresh and Bob Kennedy. At least one Sox batter got on base in every inning, the team getting a total of 12 hits, but Feller had blinding speed when he needed it most.

Girls' Tennis Today

Philadelphia, Aug. 30 (AP).—Wet courts caused postponement today, for the fifth consecutive day, of the National Girls' Tennis tournament, but officials hoped to get play under way Saturday afternoon.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 30.

One of the more progressive sporting goods firms has signed up most of the better tennis players who are playing today in the National singles at Forest Hills. The boys and girls have no specific duties, except to continue winning and holding the firm's racquets in such a way as will show up the brand in the news pictures.

CONSIDINE

The salaries are modest, but the work is pleasant and we fail to comprehend why the tennis officials don't thank the firm, instead of prying into this benevolent subsidy, looking for cancelled checks. The U. S. L. T. A. even hauled one of the boys, Elwood Cooke, up on the mat because he played a few exhibition matches with the firm's No. 1 (and cheerfully acknowledged) employee, Don Budge. The brass hats and it smacked of sordid professionalism, even though the exhibitions were free and for the benefit of kids who never could afford to go to amateur Forest Hills. So Cooke went back to his regular duties with the firm, and Budge now must play only with fellow professionals.

This sweeping subsidy takes a load off the backs of the tennis clubs which have been supporting the better amateurs of all sexes. If it had come along in 1927, after we lost the Davis Cup, it would have saved the U. S. L. T. A. about $150,000, for it cost the association that much to support the many teams which led up to the recapture of the cup. The firm would have picked up this tab gladly, and asked only that the boys use the right kind of swatters.

The tennis officials do a lot of exploit the amateurs. But the sporting goods firm, which has furtively signed up the topnotchers, wouldn't think of going in for parallel ballyhoo. It never mentions the alliance between itself and the reported pures. And, of course never sends around pictures of the boys and girls or publicity about them. It is much more discreet about exploitation than the association which deplores the subsidy's existence. All the firm asks is that the boys and girls hold the bats the right way when photographers ask them to look at the birdie.

We get confused about amateurism. The tennis people tend to make bums of their top kids, and, when they slip, take away their license on the grounds that they are bums. You can watch Budge, the pro, for nothing, but it costs dough to see Riggs, the amateur. The golf people now have told Jim Ferrier, the Australian amateur, that he can't play in the National Amateur next week, although he has been playing in amateur competitions in this country for months.

The complaint against Ferrier is that he is a part-time sports-writer and that he published a book on golf, in Australia. In other words he became so efficient at his sport that there was a demand that he pass along apt advice to beleagured fellow players. This made some chemical change take place in his body, according to the U. S. G. A., and for this service to the golf world he is barred from a tournament 12,000 miles from home—a tournament to which he would have been a colorful and dangerous addition.

Yet on the day Ferrier was barred we received a copy of a fine new golf book entitled "Golf, As I Play It," with analysis by Dick Chapman and Ledyard Sands. Chapman is one of our best golfers, and he qualified for the amateurs. He will be among those present at Winged Foot next week, and we hope he wins it. But what kind of double-jointed action is that which bans the literary Ferrier and lets in the home-grown dabbler in the written word?

Schindler Named All-Star Squad's 'Most Valuable'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 30. — Ambrose Schindler, hard-driving blond halfback of Southern California, was named today the "most valuable" player for the college All-Stars in their wild-scoring exhibition with the Green Bay Packers last night.

Selected by sports writers covering the game, Schindler nosed out Iowa's Nile Kinnick for the honor. Several other collegians also received votes.

The Packers won the game, 45 to 28, in a brilliant show of aerial football. The game produced 73 points—10 touchdowns, 10 points after and a field goal, or only 4 points less than the total scored in six previous All-Star games.

Scores Third Ace

Coral Gables, Fla., Aug. 30.—Just a breeze to Mrs. Roland B. Raymond —that 120-yard seventh hole on the Granada golf course. Mrs. Raymond scored her third hole-in-one there today. The first was made two years ago, the second last summer.

Rowell, Rookie Batting Sensation, Given New Contract by Boston Bees

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Boston Bees have torn up Carvel Rowell's 1940 contract and given him a new one more fitting for the National League's leading hitter . . . also they have him under contract already for 1941, which will forestall any holdout trouble this winter . . . Harry Craft, the Cincinnati Reds' nifty centerfielder, has played 101 games without an error . . . Earl Mann, the Atlanta baseball tycoon, is a visitor here and says the "Landis compromise" forced down the throats of baseball's farm operators last spring, is working to the satisfaction of all concerned . . . the St. Louis Browns don't have a lot to be proud of, except the hitting of Rip Radcliff, but they're leading both major leagues in double plays with 145.

Bob Feller has 218 strikeouts to his credit, which is nearly double the total of any other hurler in the majors . . . Whitlow Wyatt, of the Dodgers, tops the National League with 110 . . . Connie Mack, who paid $45,000 to sign Benny McCoy last winter, now has five second basemen wearing Philadelphia Athletics' uniforms . . . Jimmy Dykes says the Yankees "may" be lucky enough to sneak in, but he doesn't think so . . . The Tigers still are his favorites and Cleveland: "They're out in front now but will probably fold up as usual." . . . Can you beat this? Alex Kampouris, of Newark, one of the International League's top home run swatters, hasn't connected for the circuit on a Wednesday this season.

Your guess is as good as anybody's as to what is holding up the Yankee sale . . . A report is around that Ray Mueller, Syracuse catcher formerly with the Boston Bees and Pittsburgh Pirates, is being sought by the Boston Red Sox . . . The Brooklyn Dodgers, who planned to make their entire Western jaunt by plane, had to come home tonight by train because of bad weather . . . 23 of Cleveland's games have been decided by one run with the Indians winning 19 and losing 14.

The Cleveland city council is so sure the Indians are "in" that it has voted $8,000 for a new ramp at the Municipal Stadium to accommodate the World's Series mob . . . Johnny Mize is a left-handed golfer . . . don't say it would be silly if he weren't; Babe Ruth and a lot of other good left-handed batters take their golf on the right side . . . Baseball men are saying the Tigers finally are getting some return on that dough ($70,000) they spent for Freddy Hutchinson because of the way he pitched Detroit out of its slump . . . You can't catch Judge Landis out on a limb . . . He doesn't plan to hold a meeting to make World Series arrangements for a few weeks yet.

Little Mowlee, at $7.90, Routs Field in Marlboro Feature

Din Second, Defeated by Four Lengths

Double Pays $48.90; Triphammer Takes 3d Straight Race; 7,000 See Program

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 30.—Little Mowlee, which had all the appearances of a fugitive from a merry-go-round in his previous outing, became a second Man o' War today and jogged off with the La Plata Purse, feature of the Friday program here. The son of Mowlee, owned by George Perry and trained by Dick Pending, track superintendent at Bowie, ran out, got in other horses' way and was beaten off more than five lengths here last Tuesday while backed down to odds of 2 to 1. Today, in the same company, with the same rider, at the same weight but at longer odds, Little Mowlee jumped to the front in the opening ten yards and bounded along in front to win by four lengths, under a grip.

Jockey Willie Obert did the riding, or the guiding, for that was all necessary today. Second to the $7.90 winner was C. M. Feltner's Din, a half length in advance of Mrs. C. B. Inscoe's Doctor's Nurse.

There was nothing to the race but the gelding foaled by a mare named Honesty. Little Mowlee quickly went to the front of Miss Maker and Din. He drew clear, was steadied while turning back challenges of Prince Turley and Din and then drew out with the ease of the Queen Mary pulling away from a group of rowboats.

A good portion of the crowd of 7,000 cashed the daily double of $48.90. W. C. Barr's Dressmaker won the first race under good handling by Jockey G. Rose and paid $10. Chief Cherokee made it two in a row in the second race, winning while piloted by Jockey R. D. Scott, and provided an individual pay off of $10.90.

Triphammer, 2-year-old purchased recently by Danny Galotta, of Washington, won his third straight at this meeting in the event for juveniles and became the first horse to turn the trick. Jockey A. Vesseli again was in the saddle and the son of Caruso paid a mere $3.80 mutuel.

Apprentice Jockey Herbert Claggett visited the winner's circles in the fifth race aboard More Poise. The $10.50 shot came from behind to win.

Local Grays Play Two Games Tomorrow

The Homestead Grays, Washington's entry in the Negro National Baseball League, undertake what they hope will be their last outing in a successful search for the title tomorrow at Griffith Stadium. A pair of games with the Baltimore Elite Giants, leaders by a half game, will conclude the regular season. Starting time will be 2 p. m.

Auto League Opens

Arcade Pontiac and Goodman Studebaker nines will officially launch the newly organized Washington Automobile Baseball League tomorrow at 3 p. m. The North Ellipse diamond will be the scene.

32 Championship Winners Entered in Warrenton Show

200 Entered In Two-Day Horse Event

Oglebay's Famed Stable Has Holystone And Question in Show Today

By Anne Hagner

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 30.—Thirty-two championship winners head the list of entries for the Warrenton Horse Show, which will be held here tomorrow and Monday with more than 200 horses participating.

Two unexpected entries have come from Crispin Oglebay's famed stable at Cleveland, Ohio, which is sending its Holystone, grand hunter champion of the National Horse Show in New York two years ago, and its brilliant open jumper, Question.

Holystone, chestnut son of Man o' War, was also reserve winner last year at the National, and is expected to be one of Warrenton's most formidable threats for the title here.

Another Madison Square Garden champion who will show this weekend is Holiday Hill Farm's Big John, from Mentor, Ohio. Big John is no new performer for Warrenton audiences, as he won two legs on the championship trophy here in 1935 and 1937. A victory this year would give his stable permanent possession of the valuable challenge bowl.

Many Champions Listed

Other champions listed are Bon Diable and The Bear, owned by Mrs. Altemus Whitney; Balkonian, Inky and Lucky Buck, from Mrs. George Watts Hill's extensive hunter barns at Durham, N. C.; Eleanor Moffett's Candolette; Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's To Victory and Village Miss; Howard Haffner's Bobby E., from Charlottesville; Mrs. James C. Hamilton's Golondrina; Dr. Lewis M. Allen's Clifton's Lad; Robert S. Waters' Royalty II, from Johnstown, Pa.; Lee's Birthday, owned by George G. Lee, of Norfolk; J. J. McIntyre's North Call, from Hobby Horse Farm at Hollins, Va.; Ernest L. Redmon's Rascality, and Mrs. D. N. Lee's Spanish Spear, both in the 3-year-old championship race; Betty Couzens' Repulsion and Jag; Mrs. Harry Frank's Clifton's Beau and Our Way, and North Fletcher's Troop.

The open jumpers' division is equally well fitted with past tricolor winners, including Mr. and Mrs. Perry's Huntley Glen, Alex Calvert's Momma, Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr.'s, Black Caddy; Mrs. Whitney's Bon Nuit, Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Howard Butz's Hobo, Springsbury Farm's Billy Do, and Peggy Sampson's Hi-Ho Silver and Black Boy.

Hughes' grand old black stallion, veteran of many jump-offs at 6 feet and above, is in top form following two victories at the Orange Horse Show early this week and is regarded as the most likely candidate for the jumping crown. However, the breaks of the show game being what they are, many hunt country fans predict that Bon Nuit, Huntley Glen, and other good fencers will offer plenty of trouble to the Washington-owned stallion.

High-Class Competition

The hunter race, which many experts predicted would go to Mrs. Hill's Inky or Balkonian, has been thrown wide open by the Holystone and Big John entries. Whether Virginia horses will be able to stand up under such high-class competition remains to be seen, but the quality of horses showing guarantees that Warrenton will gain Nation-wide attention.

Because the show grounds lack space for an outside course, all hunter classes will naturally be run over fences in the ring. This factor is looked upon as a means of making the hunter division anybody's battle, for such horses as Holystone, Inky, and Our Way are at their best over outside fences.

The show committee, headed by J. North Fletcher, has extended an invitation to the 15 English children who are at Eugene Meyer's Clovercroft, for the duration of the war, to attend both sessions of the show.

In addition to the usual show events, there will be an auction of several large consignments of hunters during the luncheon recess tomorrow. The show commences at 9 a. m.

Eckert Pacer Wins Stake

Takes Free-for-All In Straight Heats

By the Associated Press

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 30.—Pacing what officials described as the three fastest heats over a half-mile track in the United States this year, Grattan Axworthy, owned by Walter B. Eckert, of Reading, Pa., won the free-for-all pace in straight heats today at the Champlain Valley Exposition.

The times were 2:02½, 2:02¾ and 2:02¾. Eight thousand persons saw the race between five horses whose records were within two seconds of each other.

Forbes Direct, owned by Mrs. Fred Gross, of Auburn, Me., and driven by James Jordan, was second and the Widower, from the Syracuse (N. Y.) stable of Vic Fleming, with Townsend Ackerman as driver, was third.

Grattan Axworthy, a brown gelding by Amun Rae, was driven by Harry Goodhart. He set a terrific pace in each heat, taking the first by a length and a half and the other two by a neck. All five entries were within a length of each other at the finish.

Seek Double-Header

Red Sox Bunch 11 Hits, Beat Athletics, 5-4

Williams' Triple Scores Cramer, Breaks Deadlock in 7th

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—Boston's Red Sox gained a half game on the idle third-place New York Yankees today by capturing the opener of a four-game series with the Athletics, 5 to 4. A light drizzle kept a ladies' day crowd at Shibe Park down to 5,000.

Doc Cramer's double and Ted Williams' triple, scoring Cramer, broke a 4-4 deadlock in the seventh to give Boston the decision. The Sox got 11 hits off three A's pitchers.

Relieving Fritz Ostermueller on the mound in the fourth, Joe Heving turned in a brilliant performance and held the A's to two hits in his five and one-third innings of duty.

Ostermueller had held the Mackmen to a single by Benny McCoy until the fourth. Then came the deluge. Bob Johnson singled sharply to left. Dick Siebert smashed one back at Fritz, who fiddled with it before he got it in his left hand. When he did, Siebert was safe at first.

Frankie Hayes singled, scoring Johnson, and McCoy walked, filling the bases. Siebert scored as Joe Cronin tossed out Al Brancato. Ed Heusser fanned, but Al Rubeling singled and drove in Hayes and McCoy. Heving, replacing Ostermueller, walked F. Chapman, filling the bags again. But Johnson flied out to end the inning.

Boston bunched three hits for four runs in the second. Ted Williams doubled and went to third on a passed ball. Joe Cronin walked and Bobby Doerr doubled, scoring Williams. Lou Finney tripled to center, sending Cronin and Doerr home.

Football Huddle Faces Discard As Coaches Return to Signals

Shifting Defense Making Family Circle Method Ineffective, Says Temple Mentor; Others Agree

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—Smart defense can kick the best-laid huddle plans all over the gridiron and the family circle method of calling plays is heading for the discard, Coach Ray Morrison, of Temple University, said today.

Fewer college teams than ever will use the huddle this fall, predicted the veteran coach who developed Southern Methodist's aerial circus. Without it "as many as 25 or 30 additional plays could be run off, giving spectators more action," he observed.

Morrison is searching for a smart quarterback to call signals. Until then, however, he intends to continue the huddle at least in the early part of the season. Intelligent quarterbacking, he acknowledged, is essential to signal barking.

Penn tried out signal calling from scrimmage in spring training. Coach George Munger said he would abolish the huddle this fall when the opposition offered "several defenses."

Munger agreed with Morrison that in modern football, one minute the defense is using a six-man line and then switches into a five or four man line as the offensive team emerges from the huddle. Then "the original play won't work at all."

In the Cornell game last year, Munger struck upon an alternate system of confusing the Cornell defense. Two sets of signals were given in the huddle. If Cornell switched the line strength, a key word was shouted from scrimmage and the alternate play was tried.

Villanova has used the huddle since Clipper Smith succeeded Harry Stuhldreher in 1936, but Smith also indicated he favors a return to signal calling.

By the Associated Press

Canandaigua, N. Y., Aug. 30.—T. and L. Varalay, Los Angeles brothers, brought their tiny Snipe, Kitten, across the line ahead of a large field today to win the second heat of the International Snipe championships.

Their victory, edging out Darby Metcalf, also of Los Angeles, and winner of yesterday's first heat, threw the title contest into a point race and put the Varalay brothers in fourth position with their first heat finish of seventh.

High winds which belabored the first two days of the International Snipe Racing Association regatta abated about noon today and the title field of more than 20 boats completed the second heat.

Metcalf's first yesterday and second today placed him in the lead, while Don Shawrer, another West Coaster from Redondo Beach, Calif., was second with a third-place finish in both heats. Third place was held by Don Cochrane, of Clearwater, Fla., with a second yesterday and fifth today.

The first heat of the women's national title event, postponed two days because of the high wind, was scheduled tomorrow morning.

Farkas Out Of 'Skin Line For Exhibition

Recurrence of Knee Injury Ends Stellar Back's Action for Week

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Fargo, N. Dak., Aug. 30 (En Route to Milwaukee with the Redskins).—Andy Farkas, leading scorer in the National Pro Football League last fall, will be out of the running when the Redskins meet the world champion Green Bay Packers in Milwaukee Monday afternoon.

The 24-year-old fullback has been unable to stir from his Pullman car berth for the past 24 hours as a result of a recurrence of an old injury to his knee in the intra-squad exhibition game Wednesday in Spokane, Wash.

With his running attack considerably weakened by Farkas' absence, Coach Ray Flaherty called the squad into a two-hour skull drill this afternoon to brush up on a quartet of new passing and running plays he will unveil against the Packers.

Plan Pass Defense

Somewhat perturbed by the Packers' scoring punch in defeating the College All-Stars, 48 to 25, last night in Chicago, Flaherty today concentrated on perfecting his pass defense and planned to emphasize this phase strongly tomorrow in the squad's first signal drill on Milwaukee's State Fair Field.

The Packers' Cecil Isbell, who hurled three long touchdown passes is one of the most feared foes, but Flaherty appears more upset by the pass-receiving threat the Packers furnish in their great end from Alabama, Don Hutson.

"If Hutson starts, we'll have to start Dick Todd or Wilbur Moore at right half because they are the only men on the squad who can cover him," Flaherty said.

The Redskin starting backfield will consist of Sammy Baugh, Ed Justice, Maxi Krause and Ernie Pinckert if Hutson is held out of the champions' starting line-up, Flaherty said.

'Skins Go Into Air

With Frank Filchock, Rookie Roy Zimmerman and Sammy Baugh, who completed seven consecutive passes for long gains in the game in Spokane, doing the throwing, the Redskins also will go in for aerial warfare. This trio has been highly effective in the two intrasquad games, while the running attack has been ragged.

Farkas, injured early in the Spokane exhibition, went out of the game, but came back to put on a spectacular running performance and score two touchdowns before he had to leave the game being tackled from behind by Dick Todd on another goal rush.

Back in a Week

The knee injury, caused by a small piece of broken cartilage bobbed up again and has left the limb almost useless. He is expected to be ready to play in another week, however.

The squad was routed out of bed this morning by an Indian "raid" at Mandan, N. Dak. A band of Sioux Indians greeted the train, made it known they wanted Owner George Marshall. Marshall was in bed, so a railroad official, acting as proxy, went out. The result was an induction ceremony that left Marshall a "brother" in the tribe with the title of "Chief Big Shot."

Pirates Call Up 13 Minor Leaguers

Seven to Report Immediately; Parker Recalled for Spring

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30.—The Pittsburgh Pirates have announced the recall of 13 players now in the minor leagues under option, seven of whom were instructed to report to the club this fall.

Those who will return before the season ends were Catcher Ray Mueller, from Rochester, International League; Outfielder Frank Kalin, from Gadsden, Southeastern League; Outfielder Halbert Simpson, Williamsport, Eastern League, and Pitchers Elmer Rambert, Lloyd Dietz and Oadis Swigart and Infielder Leip, from Syracuse, International League.

The others to report for spring training next year were Infielder Clarence (Ace) Parker, former football star now with Syracuse; Catcher Joe Schultz, jr., with Portland, Pacific Coast League; Outfielder Lloyd Yount, Little Rock, Southeastern Association; Pitcher J. Addis Copple, Harrisburg, Interstate League, and Pitcher John Gee, lanky southpaw who was ordered to report to Albany when Syracuse refuse to accept him because of a sore arm. Gee never reported to Albany.

Terps Pick Labor Day To Launch Grid Drills Of Raw 1940 Squad

By Jack Munhall

Labor Day will be no holiday for University of Maryland football candidates. For Monday is the day that the coaching triumvirate of Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods has designated for the opening of fall practice.

In cognizance of the tremendous task that confronts them in the welding of a small and inexperienced squad into a cohesive eleven to combat a back-breaking schedule, the trio decided upon an unusually early starting date.

As expected, it was announced yesterday that Faber, head coach at College Park in 1934 and 1935 before Frank Dobson took over, will be boss of the "experimental" coaching threesome. Heagy is to tutor the line, and Woods the backs. The three plan nightly meetings to exchange ideas, discuss conflicting opinions and map the practice schedule for the following day.

Lettermen Back

Of the 41 candidates ordered to report for the initial drill, 14 are lettermen from the 1939 squad, 10 others are holdovers from last year and the remaining 17 are up from the freshmen team.

Returning lettermen are Leo Mueller, Frank Dwyer and Dick Shaffer, ends; Bill Krouse and Ralph Burklin, tackles; George Geinger and John Morton, guards; Bob Smith and Jim Wharton, centers, and Joe Murphy, Bernie Ulman, Mearle DuVall, Milton Lumsden and Fred Widener, backs. Geinger, Murphy and Smith were the only undisputed regulars of last year, and Smith spent much time on the hospital list with a trick knee that still leaves him in the doubtful class.

The crack center underwent an operation that is expected to restore his limb to normalcy, but its outcome is something that must be determined on the uncompromising football battlefield. Wharton, ill during the summer, also may not be in condition for action.

Other Vets to Report

The 17 other players back from the 1939 squad are Jack Mueller and Lary MacKenzie, ends; Ashton Garrett, end or tackle; Paul McNeil, tackle; Max Hunt and Frank Heyer, guards; Frank Blazek, center, and Elmer Rigby, Jim Dunn and John Coryack, backs.

Sophs asked to report include Karl Gumnick, end; Reginald Vincent and Luther Conrad, tackles; Lohr Dunlap, John Sansone, Frank Mason, Warren O'Neil and Willie Jack, guards; Al Ruppersberger, center, and John Gilmore, Hal Berry, Joe Hoopengardner, Don Shockey, Herb Gunther, Fred Bach, Ramon Grelecki and Louis Chacos, backs.

Bach, former Tech High star, Hoopengardner and Chacos are considered good prospects.

Generally, the Maryland squad appears both too light and too inexperienced to make much headway against a schedule that includes Penn, Virginia, Florida, Georgetown, V. M. I., Rutgers and Washington and Lee. The Terps' opener will be with Hampden-Sydney at College Park September 23. Only other "breather" game is scheduled with Western Maryland October 26 at College Park.

The Old Liners, however, may turn in some upsets, for they should have a fleet and tricky backfield headed by Joe Murphy, Southern Conference sprint champion, and DuVall, the ace passer.

Banner Group of 40 Hoya Gridders to Turn Out

The largest Georgetown University football squad since Coach Jack Hagerty assumed control midway of the 1932 season will start fall training at the Hilltop Tuesday with good prospects of a third successive undefeated record.

Forty candidates, among them 18 letter winners, 5 other holdovers, and 17 strapping sophomores, are scheduled to answer the initial call.

Only five players have been lost from last year's squad, which was kept from a perfect record only by a 13-13 tie with an inspired Syracuse eleven. Three of them, End Francis Daly and Fullbacks Myron Darmohray and Frank Meglen, were graduated, while Bob Kercher, end, and Ed Kowalski, tackle, left school because of reported scholastic difficulties.

C. & P. Profit In July Rises To $148,807

Telephones in Service Show 15,875 Gain During Year

Net income of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. totaled $148,307 in July, against $122,484 in the same 1939 month, the company reported last night.

Telephones in service at the end of the month totaled 261,832, a gain of 15,875 over the same time last year, according to Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager. Investment in the telephone plant here increased $3,366,-194 during the year, he pointed out.

Operating revenues for July were $1,076,260 against $979,684 a year ago, and operating expenses were $768,330 as compared with $709,383 in July, 1939. For the seven months of 1940, operating revenues were 8.16 per cent higher than the same period last year, while expenses, including taxes, were 8.24 per cent higher. Net income for the seven months showed an increase of $45,207, or 4.2 per cent over last year.

Taxes in July amounted to $110,-190, an increase of $2,538 over July, 1939. For the seven months of 1940, taxes amounted to $818,869, which is $138,522 more than for the same period in 1939, an increase of 20.4 per cent.

Telephones in service in Washington at the end of July increased 815 telephones over the previous month. Users made 31,738,000 calls during the month, or 4,387,000 more than in July, 1939.

Expenditures of $1,391,000 for the construction of telephone plant and installation of equipment in the District of Columbia were authorized by directors at the regular meeting.

Approximately $145,000 will be spent to install private branch exchange and associated equipment for six of the company's largest business subscribers, $747,000 for additional equipment and $390,000 for underground cable. So far this year $8,725,000 has been voted for plant improvements, Mr. Robinson said.

Gas Firm Loss Reduced

The July report of the Washington Gas Light Co., filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday, shows operating revenues of $501,-878, an increase of $37,750 over the same month last year. Operating expenses and taxes amounted to $478,657, an increase of $43,477. Non-operating income increased $14,383, while income deductions decreased slightly. The net result for July was a seasonal loss of $18,838 which, however, was an improvement of $9,105 over the July, 1939, loss.

For the first seven months net income was $1,055,588, a gain of $174,169 over the same period last year.

The report also shows gas sales of 699,956,000 cubic feet for the month, an increase of 72,175,000 cubic feet, or 11 per cent over July, 1939. As of July 31 there were 159,406 meters in service, compared with 154,197 on the same date last year, an increase of 5,209. The company expended approximately $78,000 in July and $626,000 in the first seven months of 1940 for extensions.

Substantial Trade Gains

The Federal Reserve Bank reported yesterday that business during July in the Fifth District was above the seasonal level and showed substantial improvement in nearly all lines over the same month in 1939.

The Fifth District covers the States of Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia.

The bank's research and statistics department said that probably a considerable part of the increased activity was due either directly or indirectly to the preparedness program.

Distribution of goods to consumers continued higher than a year ago, but showed some seasonal decline from June. Department store sales dropped 9 per cent from the previous month, July usually being a relatively poor month in wearing apparel, but averaged 14 per cent more than sales in July last year, the bank reported.

Furniture stores also recorded a 9 per cent decline in last month's sales under June sales, but gained 10 per cent over July, 1939. Wholesale firms in a dozen or more lines sold more than in either June this year or July last year, and registration of new passenger automobiles in July also exceeded those in either June, 1940, or July, 1939.

Construction expanded sharply in July. Building permits issued in 31 Fifth District cities rose 32 per cent higher than figures for July, 1939. Contract awards in the district in July nearly doubled June figures, and were 63 per cent above awards in July last year.

Many Business Heads Need Lessons in Public Relations

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator.

Someone ought to endow a finishing school for business executives. In competitive enterprise, ability to make friends and get along with people often make the difference between success and failure.

Business manners are usually worst when the telephone is used. It is rude for Mr. A to have his secretary phone Mr. B and then hold Mr. B on the wire while Mr. A performs other chores.

Mr. Rukeyser

Likewise, it is presumptuous for Mr. A's secretary to ask over the telephone whether Mr. B is there. That is none of his business. Mr. B may be in his office engaged in an important conference, or otherwise preoccupied. The courteous way to inquire is to ask: "May Mr. A talk to Mr. B?" Such a phrasing obviates the necessity for Mr. B's deputy to invent a fib in case Mr. B doesn't wish to be disturbed.

Inasmuch as public relations is becoming a major duty of a chief executive, businessmen should learn something about how the press operates. They should understand that newspapers don't exist for the convenience of individuals, but are quasipublic institutions which perform an essential service in a democracy of keeping the people informed. Businessmen in reality can with propriety demand only the right to purchase advertising space in which to tell the truth about their products and services.

They should ask nothing of editors except to give impartial consideration to news matter submitted to them.

It is unmannerly to thank an editor or a writer for "publicity" given to an individual or a company. A reputable journalist selects material according to the criterion of what will be interesting or important for his readers. If such material happens to prove good "publicity" for a private interest, that is a pure by-product.

As for myself, I never appreciated thanks for anything I had written more than those unexpectedly received from a questionable promoter whose offering I had adversely criticized. He knew that it was not my intention to play his game. Yet, in the spirit of supersalesmanship, he telephoned me and said: "I want to thank you for the forebearance with which you criticized what I am doing. I can understand that you are seeking to look at it from the standpoint of protecting the public."

On the other hand, when I resigned way back in December, 1922, as financial and business editor of the New York Tribune, the financial advertising manager told me that many of his contacts had expressed regret at my leaving, but that a few had expressed pleasure. He was thoughful enough to add that those who were pleased included some of the buckoteers and questionable promoters whom I had been attacking. I told the ad man that I was proud of the enemies I had made.

Good business managers include a policy of being precisely as courteous to salesmen as to buyers.

Better managed concerns no longer treat venders with disdain. They recognize that the visiting salesman may be offering something of mutual value. When Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the General Motors Corporation, as a young man was on the selling staff of the Hyatt Roller Bearing Co.; some of the independent manufacturers used to look forward to his calls as they found that he not only brought samples of merchandise but also a keen insight into underlying trends in the industry.

In the spirit of being kind to salesmen, a wholesale grocery firm in Baltimore serves tea and crackers to visitors while they are waiting to see some one.

In a similar spirit, an eminent purchasing agent in Philadelphia once told me that a good purchasing agent should be a master salesman. He meant that the purchaser should have the ability to persuade the other fellow to do what he wants.

And, in the matter of courtesy, business concerns should watch their manners toward job seekers. Every applicant might possibly be genuinely worth while. If all cannot be hired, all can at least receive sincere and friendly attention.

Chill Weather In Week Spurs Retail Trade

7% to 13% Increase Recorded, Largest Since Last Easter

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 30.—Chill weather boomed retail trade in many communities this week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

"Buying was particularly spirited in women's and children's apparel and in home furnishings lines," the mercantile agency said, "but trade benefited generally from the increase in store traffic.

"Advertised specials in furniture, blankets, back-to-school wear and furs were said to have attracted good response.

"Total volume for the whole country was estimated 7 to 13 per cent above the level for 1939, the largest increase recorded since last Easter."

The upturn in consumer demand, the agency added, caught some merchants unprepared and brisk reordering of autumn merchandise enlivened wholesale markets, contrary to the usual lull before the Labor Day week-end.

Employment Sets New High For 34 Months

July Total Estimated At 46,882,000, Gain Of 4,000 in Month

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 30.—Employment in the United States during July reached the highest level since October, 1937, the National Industrial Conference Board, a research organization sponsored largely by industries, reported today.

The July total of workers was estimated at 46,882,000, a figure 4,000 higher than June and topped in the last three years only by the 47,516,-000 employed in October, 1937.

However, due to an increase in persons available for jobs, July saw a rise of 54,000 in the unemployed, bringing the number of jobless to 8,235,000. It was the first rise in unemployment in five months, the board noted: "The increase . . . is not regarded as significant, since it is entirely accounted for by the normal increase in the labor force, which is estimated at about 58,000 a month."

More than offsetting the unemployment increase, the board reported, was a rise of 95,000 in the number given work in WPA and CCC, carrying the total in those Government agencies to 2,038,000. It was the first increase noted in these rolls in five months.

Big Board Eases Ruling on Outside Market Dealings

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange, to avoid any hardship, has granted individual member requests for postponement of the September 1 effective date of its ruling against dealings by its members of exchanges in other cities in securities primarily listed on the New York Exchange.

The Federal Securities and Exchange Commission suggested general postponement of the ruling pending a study of the effects on markets in the smaller cities and upon the business of firms involved. Most extensions, numbering from 10 to 15, have been for 30 to 60 days.

Meanwhile, the New York Exchange planned to elaborate its previous presentation to the SEC in justification of the ruling, which Wall Street brokers contended would help prevent further scattering of the New York market by a shift of member dealings to Chicago, Boston and other cities.

Court Reverses Md. Tax Board In B. & O. Case

Baltimore, Aug. 30 (AP).—In a reversal of the State Tax Commission, Judge W. Conwell Smith of Circuit Court, ruled today that rolling stock of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is not subject to taxation in Maryland.

The opinion nullified the tax commission's assessment of $4,131,245 for that portion of the property located in Maryland, on which taxes and penalties would exceed $300,000.

The case, expected to reach the court of appeals, involved a clause of the road's charter issued in 1826, exempting rolling stock of the main line from taxation.

Judge Smith held that the charter, and a subsequent settlement act passed in 1878, did not intend that taxes be imposed upon additions to the rolling stock of the original main line.

Rails and Steels Lead Broad Stock Advance British Resistance Inspires Better Tone

New York, Aug. 30.—British resistance inspired a better tone in all markets today. Stocks had their best advance since July 30 and it was accomplished in the most active trading in more than two weeks. The turnover was 563,510 shares. Traders were also gratified with the breadth of the market, a total of 700 individual issues spearing the tape. That meant the printing of quotations on some issues that had not put in an appearance for weeks.

Individual advances of 1 to more than 2 points were well distributed among the speculative favorites and the average for the entire market was up 0.61 point.

Rails were a feature of the advance as were the steels, followed closely by the aviations, oils and metals. Government bonds were strong and the domestic corporate bond list moved in close accord with the junior securities.

Railroad issues came in for more than their usual attention, three carrier issues appearing among the fifteen most active stocks with New York Central leading. In this activity higher prices were realized for most rail shares, speculative as well as better grade, the composite gain being 0.50 point in the averages. Movements in the rail bond market followed the lead of the stocks, particularly in better grade loans which sold up 0.59 point in the averages.

Behind this rail rally a major factor is belated recognition of the excellent earnings record of the roads as a whole so far this year, coupled with continued high current movement of traffic and the belief that rail companies will be relatively vulnerable to the impact of the excess profits tax. Earnings figures published after the close today showed class 1 roads with July operating net up 16.3 per cent from last year and for seven months a rise of 39 per cent in operating net. Freight traffic for the last week was the highest since last November.

Strength in the steels, aviations, metals and oils, as well as in the chemicals, represented recognition for some of the war issues which have been hanging back during the period of great wrangling over the excess profits tax and the problem of amortization. Buying of the steels, like that of the rails, takes into account the improved operating rate, although somewhat belatedly. With operations at their high for the year, and holding out a promise of making a new top after the Labor Day holiday has been accounted for, the prospect is that the 1939 peak will be passed before many weeks.

Among individual stock leaders, United States Steel was a feature with a runup of 2¾ points. Bethlehem added 2, and Republic a major fraction. General Motors and Chrysler were up 1⅛ and 2½ points, respectively. Aviation Corporation, Curtiss-Wright and United led the aviations, with the last-named up 2.

Demand for listed bonds increased today, with no particular reason apparent for the optimism other than the tendency in Washington to make large contracts. The vast expenditures now contemplated failed to depress United States Treasury issues, which moved up by 1-32 to ¼ point. Some of the foreign dollar issues were dull, but almost all speculative American bonds reflected good inquiry. Turnover was $5,570,000.

Australian and Canadian bonds were in demand in the foreign section, gains running to more than a point in some instances. An irregular tone marked the German and Italian bonds, and issues of countries occupied by Reich troops. Among Latin-Americans the prevailing drift was toward better levels, Colombian and Uruguayan bonds showing largest advances.

Wheat Leads Fresh Rise in Commodities

Speculative Buying Reflects Belief of Oversold Condition

Commodity futures markets yesterday resumed their late August rally, many staples reaching new high levels for the movement.

Dealers suggested much of the buying was speculative and based on traders' belief that prices generally had been carried down to attractive levels on the long summer decline.

Chicago wheat ended with gains ranging from 1⅜ to 1¾ cents a bushel. Corn was unchanged to ⅝ higher.

New York futures markets were almost uniformly higher. Cotton moved up 15 to 30 cents a bale and firmness was attributed in part to a largely expanded business in cotton cloth.

Hides climbed .37 to .49 of a cent a pound. Showing more moderate gains were copper, lead, wool tops, cocoa, Santos coffee, rubber and silk.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples stretched its recent advance to 70.48 per cent of the 1926 average from 70.33 per cent Thursday.

Cotton Goods Buying Continues Upsurge

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—An estimated 20,000,000 yards of cotton gray goods changed hands today as Thursday's buying splurge continued in full force.

Demand spilled over into the rayon and woolen goods markets. Silk business was routine but dealers were hopeful of fall prospects.

Today's big sales of cotton goods about equaled yesterday's turnover. Consumer resistance developed as sellers tried to raise prices but there was sufficient momentum in the buying to pile up sales totals.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Regaining more than Tuesday's slight losses on advances of 10 to 20 cents, top hogs hit a new high of $7.75 today. With nothing strictly choice in the cattle market, week-end trade on medium to good steers was steady. Early trade on sheep was steady. Although hog receipts again overshot previous estimates and were about equal with last week's, values on all weight barrows and silts and sows more than recovered yesterday's reaction. Average cost yesterday dropped 5 cents, to $6.70. Best wholesale pork loins were steady at 25 cents a pound.

A few good to near choice steers sold at 10.50@11.50, the latter price being paid for yearlings and light steers, but an extreme top of $11.80 was paid for Colorado fed heifers. Very few grain-fed steers were in the market.

FHA Aid Asked In Emergency Rental Housing

Private Construction For Defense Program Sought by Realtors

By Thomas M. Cahill.

New Federal Housing Administration procedure through which private industry with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as "senior partner" could provide rental housing for defense emergencies, is suggested in a plan presented to Government officials here by Newton C. Farr and Herbert U. Nelson, respective president and executive vice president, National Association of Real Estate Boards.

At the conference, it was explained that if defense emergency housing can be supplied through private effort, with such aid as may be needed, rather than through direct Government building, it will be provided more quickly, with less adverse effect on existing housing, and will have greater salvage value where cessation of employment brings a quick end to need of extra housing space.

It was explained that in each community where need arises for construction of emergency rental housing, it is proposed that special corporations for the purpose be formed. This could be done under present provisions of the National Housing Act. Projects, however, would involve one special risk,—uncertainty as to time when defense preparations occasioning their need might be completed or suddenly shifted.

Special Insurance Fund

It is proposed that a special insurance fund be arranged for FHA for projects of this emergency nature. This fund would be separate from insurance funds backing ordinary FHA home mortgages and would not affect their safety. It might be financed through Federal money for defense measures.

Without amendment to existing law, FHA could grant mortgage insurance to 80 per cent of entire value of a rental project under this plan. If needed, RFC might participate by supplying remaining capital, taking back, for this, preferred stock in the building corporation. Under such plan, $4 of private capital would be invested for each $1 of public funds. Protection for RFC would come both from necessity which projects would be under of meeting FHA standards and interest of localities concerned. Even in default and eventual taking over by RFC, cost to the Government, it was explained, would be no greater than in the case with direct Federal building.

A. I. B. Dinner Slated

The annual fall dinner at which plans of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, for its school year, 1940-1941, will be announced, will be held at Columbia Country Club, September 12, at 6:30 p. m. Dr. Harold Stonier, New York, executive manager, American Bankers Association, will be the principal speaker. Officers of the chapter, members of its faculty, board of governors, board of consuls and officers of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will be in attendance.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Wheat fluctuated sharply in the wheat pit during the last two hours today, lifting prices almost 2 cents a bushel to the best level in more than two weeks. Mill purchasing and commission house buying started the upward movement and previous short sellers who covered accounts because of the advance added to support. Strength in securities, comment of foreign observers that the Balkan settlement might complicate German-Russian relations, and encouragement in some trade circles attributed to prolonged air warfare over Great Britain without reports of a definite turn of battle were construed as bullish factors.

Wheat closed near the best levels of the day, 1⅜-1¾ higher than yesterday, September, 73@73½; December, 75¾@75½. Other grains borrowed strength from wheat, corn closing unchanged to ⅝ higher, September, 61¼@61⅜; December, 57¼@57½; oats, ⅝-1⅛ up; rye, ¾-1 up and lard, 2-7 higher.

Some early selling was associated with the report of a leading elevator concern that spring wheat production may be considerably above the last official estimate of 205,000,000 bushels, compared with 181,000,000 bushels produced last year. September private crop reports will be released early next week.

Corn closed at the day's highs, September contracts, which had been depressed by liquidation, leading the rally due partly to short covering. New crop contracts lagged behind due to the prospects of large supplies, although a Government report suggested premature conditions indicate the new loan rate may be 61 cents, or 4 cents higher than the 1939 date. Large receipts, totaling 320 cars, and bookings of 152,000 bushels to arrive accounted for some selling.

Oats and rye followed the action of wheat, while lard was strengthened by the highest hog prices in almost a year. Finland was reported in the market for lard, having purchased substantial quantities of oils and fats the past week.

North Carolina Is Combating New Floods

New Found Gap, Where Roosevelt Plans To Speak, Imperiled

By the United Press

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 30.—The State highway department tonight rushed all available men and equipment into western North Carolina where the second flood in three weeks threatened to close roads leading to New Found Gap.

President Roosevelt plans to speak Monday at New Found Gap, on the Tennessee-North Carolina State line, when he dedicates the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

The roads were threatened by the Little Tennessee and Tuckaseigee Rivers, and approaches to them by the French Broad and Swannanoa Rivers.

Tennessee Spared So Far

W. Vance Baise, chief highway engineer, said he had called J. W. Gentry, chief highway engineer at Nashville, and that Gentry reported the floods had "not yet" damaged the roads on the Tennessee side.

President Roosevelt plans to enter the park from the Tennessee side, but highway officials said they could offer no guarantee the roads would remain open until Monday.

Chief damage was in the mountainous region of North Carolina where the flood waters have washed away 12 large steel bridges and "all temporary structures." The highways U. S. 19, N. C. 695, U. S. 23, U. S. 221 ,N. C. 194, and N. C. 18 were closed by washouts or by flood waters.

Carried Off Quickly

Baise pointed out the waters are carried off quickly and that if no more rainfall was reported over the week-end it as possible the roads could be opened. A total of 6.78 inches fell during the last 24 hours at Asheville. Mount Mitchell Observatory reported 12.10 inches.

Baise had "no idea" of conditions west of Sylva, N. C., because all roads leading to Sylva are closed and communication lines are down.

Meanwhile, the flooded section near Asheville—just recovering from the "worst floods in history" three weeks ago—reported the new floods were worse than the last.

Rayon Plant Flooded

Canton, an industrial city of 15,000, was under 8 feet of water in some places. Marshall reported a depth of 4 feet. Communications were down and industries were damaged severely.

Water in the $10,000,000 American Enka Rayon plant at Asheville forced operations to a standstill.

The French Broad washed away the Southern Railway station and several homes at Marshall, and the city was without drinking water or electric power. The main street was blocked by the wreckage of houses and large bridges were washed out.

Rev. Conner Accepts Kentucky Call

The Rev. James W. Conner, of 23 Seventh street southeast, has accepted a call to the mission field of the Diocese of Kentucky, effective September 8. He will be assistant to the Rev. Robert C. Board, rector of St. Luke's Church, Anchorage, who is also minister-in-charge of several other churches.

Since his ordination to the diaconate in June at St. Mark's Episcopal, his home church, the Rev. Mr. Conner has been serving as assistant at the Church of the Ascension and on the Washington Cathedral staff. He is a graduate of the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria. He will assist the Rev. Robert Plumb, rector, in services tomorrow at St. Mark's.

"I Can't Put A Sailboat In A Trunk"

The "Rover" has been lots of fun this summer, but I can't take it back to college with me. Time is getting short; I have to sell the boat in a hurry. Any suggestions?

Answer:

Shucks, that's no problem at all. Post readers are good prospects for boats—past records prove it—so offer the "Rover" for sale in the classified section of Sunday's Post. Remember—an ad in Sunday's Post costs less than in any other Washington Sunday paper.

Valor Legion Asks Mitchell Exoneration

Congress Is Urged To Clear Late General On All Charges

The Army and Navy Legion of Valor yesterday petitioned Congress to vindicate the late Brig. Gen. William Mitchell who, in December, 1925, was courtmartialed as a result of expressing his views on the Nation's air policies.

The legion, now in annual reunion here, unanimously urged the action, requested in a resolution offered by Past National Commander Ralph W. Robart, of Cambridge, Mass.

"... We recall the courageous and heroic acts of our late companion, Col. William Mitchell. We feel that he should be vindicated of any acts of his which now prove that such acts were as the result of his extreme foresight in recognizing many years ago the need of adequate national defense, particularly the aviation branch, in which he was so efficiently skilled," said the resolution.

The Congress was petitioned to pass House Concurrent Resolution 82, introduced by Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, calling for exoneration of Mitchell on all charges. The legion asked that Mitchell's resignation, which was tendered following the courtmartial, be recorded as "resignation under honorable circumstances."

Additional resolutions called for disbanding the Communist Party in the United States and for a prohibition of organizations with foreign connections that drill members in military fashion. The organization further asked deportation of all noncitizens here who belong to the Communist Party or espouse its principles. Such citizens should be held guilty of a crime against the Nation, the resolution held.

The legion, by resolution, placed itself in the hands of the Government in the national emergency. Leading members said this meant they were ready to fight again.

Chicago was selected as the next reunion city. Highlight of the program today is a banquet in the Willard Hotel, to begin at 1:30 p. m.

Parksley, Va., Aug. 30.—The D. C. Fire Department softballers split a double-header here last night. The local smoke eaters captured the opener by a 13 to 4 count, but lost the nightcap, 7-6.

Sullivan's pitching and the home-run clouting of Al Harringer and Zanelotti featured the last game. Morris Clark and George Larrick made sparkling catches afield, while Curley White pitched a steady game.

Dedication Of Gen. Jackson Shrine Today

Gov. Price to Speak At Equestrian Statue In Manassas Rites

Several thousand persons are expected to witness the dedication at 2 p. m. today of an equestrian statue to Gen. Stonewall Jackson at Manassas, scene of the first grand-scale battle of the Civil War.

Speakers will include Gov. Price of Virginia, Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, biographer of R. E. Free, and former State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, who introduced the bill in the Virginia Legislature creating the monument.

The monument has been placed on the Henry House plateau, where Jackson received his battle name "Stonewall" on July 21, 1861. The place may be reached by following the Lee highway from Washington to the historic Stone House on the highway, and turning there to the left. From this point the scene is about a half mile.

The monument is 21 feet tall and reveals the general astride his famous war horse, "Old Sorrel." It was executed by Joseph P. Pollis, New York sculptor.

The Virginia Conservation Commission has sent 1,000 invitations to special guests, including approximately 90 Confederate soldiers.

Snead Defeats Gene Sarazen In P. G. A. Play

McSpaden, Guldahl And Nelson Reach Semis at Hershey

They halved the next, and the veteran still was two to the good with six to play.

Then Sarazen's game, which had been magnificent all week, finally went to pot. On the thirty-first hole, a long one, he drove into the rough, put his second behind a wide-spreading bush and wound up with a six, one up.

Sarazen's Bid Thwarted

Came the thirty-third and he sprayed his drive into the tall and uncut again, flailed his recovery beyond the green, and the match was square. Sarazen looked sick. On the next hole, the thirty-fourth, Snead studied a 12-footer for a long time and knocked it in for a birdie to take the lead for the first time in the match.

They shot pars on the final two holes and Sarazen's great bid was ended.

All the four survivors belonged where they were, on their records. Nelson lost to Henry Picard in the play-offs a year ago. Snead has been knocking at the door for several years. In fact, he's a notorious door-knocker. Guldahl from tee to cup is one of the game's artists, though slower than would seem possible.

GOLF SUMMARIES

Harold McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., defeated Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., 4 and 2.

Sam Snead, Shawnee on Delaware, Pa., defeated Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn., 1 up.

Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio, defeated Eddie Kirk, Framingham, Mich., 6 and 5.

PAIRINGS

Sam Snead, Shawnee on Delaware, Pa., vs. Harold McSpaden, Winchester, Mass.

Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio, vs. Ralph Guldahl, Chicago.

Maryland Club Plans to Buy Game Refuge

By the Associated Press

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 30.—The Peninsula Beagle Club is completing final arrangements for the purchase of a 133-acre game refuge and hunting preserve, Secretary J. Wallace B. Pollitt announced today.

The club, composed of 50 members representing every section of the Delmarva Peninsula, is buying the Hitchcock farm in Wicomico County, and the Johnson School property.

The former schoolhouse will be converted into a clubhouse.

Conservation work will start Monday, Labor Day, Pollitt said, when a tractor will start plowing cleared land on the farm for planting food patches for wild life.

The planting will provide a natural cover for rabbits and Pollitt has been authorized to purchase 150 young rabbits to be liberated on the farm. More than 30 per cent of the land is cleared. The remainder is woodland.

The club plans to hold field trials monthly during the fall and winter hunting seasons, in cooperation with the State game department.

Baer, Comiskey To Meet in Sept.

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 30 (U.P.)—Abe J. Green, boxing commissioner for New Jersey, announced today that Maxie Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman, had wired acceptance of terms for a fight with Young Pat Comiskey at the Jersey City ball park in late September.

Green had given Hoffman and Promoter Jack Kearns until 6 p. m. today to close for the fight or to abandon negotiations. Hoffman and Kearns had been bickering over terms for nearly two weeks.

Hoffman's telegram from Sacramento, Calif., notified Green that he and Baer had accepted a guarantee of $30,000 with the alternate privilege of taking 30 per cent of the net gate. They will receive also one-third of receipts from the radio and movie rights. Neither the exact date nor the number of rounds have been decided yet.

Listen! with Glynn

Among its many other architectural splendors, it seems that Washington boasts as fine and extensive a collection of beautiful doorways as you can find anywhere in the world.

There are so many, in fact, that a book exclusively about them has been written by a Washington writer and, with finely drawn illustrations, it appears in the bookstores today.

Its author is Annabel Paxton, Mrs. Alexander Graham Betts, who has been writing articles for the papers and magazines on the Capital's structural pulchritude these many years. She's to be a guest on Vesta Eales' book program over WJSV at noon today to tell about it.

Miss Paxton uses the doorways as entrances for interesting excursions into the lives of the people who have passed, through them—some of the most colorful characters the Nation has known. But, of course, she also devotes a large share of attention to their architectural aspects.

Unfortunately the book is not before me; it's my own press time, and I can't reach Mrs. Eales by telephone. So I regret that I can't give you the names of the four very good artists who've done the illustrations.

The book is published by the Dietz Press, of Richmond—which has something of a colorful history itself, it being the concern that printed the Confederacy's money in the War Between the States.

It Takes a Heap o' 'Planning' In a House To Make it Home

WITH APOLOGIES TO EDGAR A. GUEST

Mr. Guest was right.

It does take a heap o' Livin' in a place to make it home.
But it takes more than that.
It takes a heap o' Fixin' . . . and a heap o' Plannin' . . . and a whale of a lot of Good Judgment in Color Harmony and Decoration. And up to now it took the combined talents of a Professional Shopper, a Fortune Teller and an Interior Decorator . . . and a bankroll big enough to choke a horse.

If you wanted Green, let's say, in your Living Room, you had to take the kind of green the manufacturers gave you . . . one shade for the furniture . . . another for the rugs . . . still another for the lamps . . . and three or four other shades for the draperies and furnishings.

When you got all through, your room looked like something out of Edgar Allen Poe . . . unless, of course, you could afford the luxury of professional decorators, and the high tariff of decorator-pieces.

And even then you had to compromise with your own conscience! But that's all in the past!

TODAY, IN ONE STORE, UNDER ONE ROOF, YOU CAN ACHIEVE COMPLETE AND CORRECT COLOR-HARMONY FOR EVERY ROOM IN YOUR HOME . . . AND FOR EVERYTHING IN EVERY ROOM!

That store is The Hecht Co.!

For years we've struggled with the problem of providing a complete service for Home-makers . . . one that would enable the average man and woman to assemble their own furniture and furnishings . . . dictating their own preference as to color and shade . . . at moderate prices . . . and in good taste.

And we've done it!

It didn't happen overnight. And it wasn't a job that could be done solely by the store and its buyers.

It had to start with the manufacturers of the merchandise . . . the mills who weave the fabrics . . . and loom the rugs . . . and make the lamps . . . and all the other products that go into a well-ordered and livable home.

So we took our problem to America's foremost manufacturers—and asked for their help.

We asked them to give us Upholstered Furniture, Rugs, Draperies, Bedspreads and Comforts, Linens and Towels, and a hundred other home essentials . . . IN COMPLETE HARMONY WITH EACH OTHER . . . both as to color and design.

This was a Herculean job . . . even for America's great manufacturers.

And it required a full year of research and planning by our own Color Consultants, in collaboration with our mills and resources. Colors and shades had to be decided on. Designs had to be worked out, and complete cooperation had to be obtained between all of these great makers . . . in order to achieve our purpose.

And now it's ready . . . ready for you . . . at The Hecht Co.

Today, for the first time, you may choose from a specially selected group of merchandise . . . carried in regular stock in every homeware department . . . all of the furniture and home accessories to fit your needs and your pocketbook . . . all of it in complete color harmony . . . all of it in completely good taste.

In short, The Hecht Co. now brings you a service which hitherto has only been obtainable through a decorator, and at prohibitive cost . . . and we bring it to you at no extra cost whatever!

You may have your Living Room in Green now, if you want it . . . or in Blue, or in any one of the SEVEN BASIC COLORS . . . positive and confident that everything you select will harmonize and match.

Because everything's been built to harmonize and match!

And why, you ask, are there SEVEN BASIC COLORS? Simply because we've found by experience and research that those are the seven colors most sought for in home decoration.

But remember, those seven colors appear in countless combinations, designs and fabrics, providing unlimited possibilities as to their use.

And what are the Seven Basic Colors? We list their names: Gooseberry Green . . . Old Gold . . . Pompadour Rose . . . Romantic Blue . . . Dregs of Wine . . . Honey Beige and Venetian Red.

Every one of our manufacturers has used those seven basic shades . . . in the manufacturer of this special merchandise . . . and whether the color appears in a flowered damask, a striped faille, a figured chintz or a broadloom carpet . . . IT IS ALWAYS IN A HARMONIZING TONE OF THESE COLORS.

But that's not all.

In order to make your shopping easy, and to simplify your choice, we've built THE COLOR BAR, where you will find a complete selection of these fabrics . . . actual samples of the draperies, upholstery fabrics for chairs and sofas . . . samples of broadloom and all the other fabrics . . . each piece representing merchandise that's right in stock . . . already built for you . . . chairs . . . sofas . . . ready-made draperies . . . bedspreads . . . linens and all . . . all ready for immediate delivery . . . and all amazingly low priced!

But that's still not all.

We wanted to be sure how all this merchandise would look in actual use . . . how it would appear right in your home . . . so that you might visualize it completely . . . even before you bought it.

So we built a complete home right on our fourth floor . . . and furnished it with correlated merchandise . . . right out of these stocks. And we called it the "Concord House" . . . because it represents concord and harmony in the relation of all its merchandise.

And we cordially invite you to see for yourself how completely and how beautifully this merchandise combines to make a tasteful, livable, comfortable, attractive home.

You'll see the bedroom with its Cheltenham cotton printed draperies, matching the comfortable slipper chair . . . with a Down Satin (rayon celanese) bedspread of the exact rose shade of the draperies.

You'll see a beautiful rose-and-green Living Room, combining a half-dozen or more fabrics . . . all of them featuring "Concord House" colors.

You'll see the Bathroom and the adjoining linen closet, with accessories and linens in perfect harmony and accord . . . right down to the last bath-mat and wash-cloth.

And to help you easily identify all of this merchandise, as you shop throughout the homeware departments of The Hecht Co. . . . we've made a special label . . . and you'll find it on every piece of our "Concord House" merchandise.

Look for the "Concord House" label . . . It's the sign of harmony and good taste . . . and your authentic guide to correct color correlation in home-furnishing.

It will save you endless hours of shopping . . . the tireless task of fixin' and plannin' we spoke about at the top of our story . . . and you won't need a bankroll big enough to choke even a small-sized horse.

We've done the fixin' and plannin' . . . and we've left you only the pleasant part of the job . . . the part so beautifully and so aptly written in the words of Edgar Guest:

"It takes a heap o' livin' in a house to make it Home."
